The Frenzy of Suibhne

Note to the reader

The edition of the Medieval Irish text used in this presentation is the 1931 edition, rather than the original 1913 edition. Among the differences between the two editions is the insertion or omission of length marks over vowels.

Dála Shuibhne Mhic Colmáin Chuair, rí Dhál Araidhe,

thráchtamar cheana ar an tslí ar chuaigh sé ar fáinneáil agus ar foluain as an gcath.

Cuirfear síos anseo ar chuíis agus ar ócaid na n-airíonna agus na ráigeanna buile agus eitilte sin a tháinig air thar chách i gcoitinne

agus ar an méid a tharla dó dá éis sin.

As to Suibhne, son of Colman Cuar, king of Dal Araidhe,

we have already told how he went wandering and flying out of battle.

Here are set forth the cause and occasion whereby these symptoms and fits of frenzy and flightiness came upon him beyond all others,

likewise what befell him thereafter.

Robaoi-sidhe fecht ann ag tórainn chille i nDál Araide .i. Ceall Luinni a comhainm.

Lá amháin bhí Rónán ag tomhas amach ionad cille dó féin i nDál Araide. Cill Luinne ab ainm don áit.

On one occasion he was marking out a church named Cell Luinne in Dal Araide.

As é robadh rígh ar Dhál Araide an ionbaidh sin
.i. an Suibhne, mac Colmáin, adru[b]rumar.

B'é a bhí ina rí ar Dhál Araide an tráth sin, Suibhne Mac Colmáin a luamar cheana.

(At that time Suibhne, son of Colman, of whom we have spoken, was king of Dal Araide.)

Rocuala 'diu Suibhne arm a raibhí gut[h] chluig Rónáin

ag tórainn na cille,

go rofhíarfacht dia muintir cidh adchualadar.

“Rónán Fionn mac Bearaigh,” ar síad,

Chuala sé, mar a raibh sé, torann chlog
Rónáin

agus eisean ag tochait láithreach cille dó féin.

“Cad é sin a chloisim?” cheistigh sé a mhuintir a bhí fairis.

“Sin é Rónán Fionn Mac Bearaigh”, arsa siadsan.

Now, in the place where he was, Suibhne heard the sound of Ronan's bell

as he was marking out the church, and he asked his people what it was they heard.

“It is Ronan Finn, son of Bearach,” said they,

“atá ag tórainn chille it chrích-si ocus it fheronn ocus as é guth a chluig itchluini-si anosa.”

Rolonnaigedh ocus rofergaigedh go mór antí chuid talúnsa

agus is é torann a chloig a chloiseann tú anois.”

Tháinig taom fiochmhar buile agus mórshuaitheadh ar Shuibhne ar chloisint an méid sin.

Amach leis de ruathar do ruaigeadh an chléirigh ón láthair.

Thriail a bhean, Eorann, iníon Choinn Chiannachta, stop a chur leis. Rug sí ar bhinn den chlóca cortharach corcra a bhí thart air

ach an biorán íonairgid foróraithe

a dhún an clóca thar a ucht, phreab sé ar fúd an urláir agus fágadh an clóca go hiomlán i lámh na banríona.

“who is marking out a church in your territory and land,

and it is the sound of his bell you now hear.”

Suibhne was greatly angered and enraged, and he set out with the utmost haste to drive the cleric from the church.

His wife Eorann, daughter of Conn of Ciannacht, in order to hold him, seized the wing of the fringed, crimson cloak which was around him,

so that the fibula of pure white silver,
neatly inlaid with gold,

which was on his cloak over his breast, sprang through the house.

Therewith, leaving his cloak with the queen,

ocus dothaod roimhi lomnocht ina réim roiretha do dhíochar an chléirigh ón chill co riacht áit ina raibhe Rónán.

As go brách le Suibhne áfach lomnocht i dtreo an chléirigh lena dhíchur as an láthair.

Nuair a bhain Suibhne amach an áit ina raibh Rónán,

he set out stark-naked in his swift career
to expel the cleric from the church, until he reached the place where Ronan was.

Section 4

As amhlaidh robhúi an cléirech ar cionn Suibhne an ionbaidh sin,

ag moladh rígh nimhe [ocus] talman

Rogabh Suibhne lámh Rónáin iarsin is amhlaidh a fuair sé an cléireach roimhe ag an am sin

ag moladh rí neimhe is talún, is é sin, ag léamh a chuid salm go háthasach
as a shaltair líneach lánálainn os a chomhair.

Sciob Suibhne an tsaltair uaidh agus theilg isteach in uisce doimhin fuar an locha í
gur bádh ann í.

Rug ar láimh ansin ar Rónán

He found the cleric at the time glorifying the King of heaven and earth by blithely chanting his psalms with his lined, right-beautiful psalter in front of him.

Suibhne took up the psalter and cast it into the depths of the cold-water lake which was near him, so that it was drowned therein.

Then he seized Ronan's hand

co rotharraing ina dhiaigh é tar an ccill amach agus tharraing amach ina dhiaidh é as an gcill.

and dragged him out through the church after him, ucus níor léicc láimh an chléirigh úaidh fós no go ccúala an éighemh.

Choinnigh sé a ghreim air go dtí gur chuala sé scréach ghuaiseach gar dó.

nor did he let go the cleric's hand until he heard a cry of alarm.

As é dorinne an éighemh sin .i. giolla Congail Chlaoin mic Sgannláin, B'é duine a lig an scréach sin seirbhíseach Chongail Chlaoin Mhic Scanláin.

It was a serving-man of Congal Claon, son of Scannlan, who uttered that cry;

arna thecht ar cenn Shuibhne ó Chongal fé[i]n do chur chatha Mhuighe Rat[h].

Theastaigh ó Chongal go rachadh Suibhne ar aghaidh go Maigh Rath chun páirt a ghlacadh sa chath mór a bheadh ann ar ball.

he had come from Congal himself to Suibhne in order that he (Suibhne) might engage in battle at Magh Rath.

Ó ráinic an giolla co háit n-iomagallmha fri Suibhne

Tháinig an tseirbhíseach chuig an áit chun caint le Suibhne.

When the serving-man reached the place of parley with Suibhne, adféd sgéla dhó ó thús go deredh.

D'inis an seirbhíseach a scéal do Shuibhne ó thús go deireadh.

he related the news to him from beginning to end.

Ag deireadh lae is oíche tháinig dobharchú a bhí sa loch chun Rónáin

agus a shaltair ina bhéal aige gan milleadh líne

Ghaibh Rónán buíochas le Dia as an míorúilt sin

agus iar sin chuir a mhallacht ar Shuibhne mar seo:

“Gurb é mo thoilse mar aon le toil an Choimde chumhachtaigh,” ar sé, “amhail mar a tháinig seisean do

Thereafter, at the end of a day and a night,

an otter that was in the lake came to Ronan with the psalter, and neither line nor letter of it was injured.

Ronan gave thanks to God for that miracle,

and then cursed Suibhne, saying:

“Be it my will, together with the will of the mighty Lord,

that even as he came stark-naked to expel me,

may it be thus that he will ever be, naked, wandering and flying throughout the world;

may it be death from a spear-point that will carry him off.

gur díothú agus milleadh a bheidh i ndán dóibh

an lá a dhearcaidh siad an tsaltair seo a theilg Suibhne isteach san uisce,” agus dúirt an laoi seo:

My curse once more on Suibhne, and my blessing on Eorann who strove to hold

him;

and furthermore, I bequeath to the race of Colman

that destruction and extinction may be their lot

the day they shall behold this psalter which was cast into the water by Suibhne”;

and he uttered this lay:

Tháinig maith domsa de,

ó tháinig fios an chatha dá bhrostú chun an ardfhlatha.

“Suibhne, son of Colman, has outraged me, he has dragged me with him by the hand,
to leave Cell Luinne with him,
that I should be for a time absent from it.

He came to me in his swift course on hearing my bell;
he brought with him vast, awful wrath
to drive me out, to banish me.

Loth was I to be banished here from the place where I first settled;
though loth was I,
God has been able to prevent it.

He let not my hand out of his until he heard the loud cry which said to him: ‘Come to the battle, Domnall has reached famous Magh Rath.’

Good has come to me therefrom, not to him did I give thanks for it when tidings of the battle came for him to join the high prince.

S.

D'ionsaigh an cath go cian inar chlaon a chonn is a chiall,

Iarracht breith ar a bħrat dhein Eorann, iníon Choinn Chiannacht, mo bheannacht ar Eorann de,
is mo mhallacht ar Shuibhne.”

From afar he approached the battle whereby were deranged his sense and reason, he will roam through Erin as a stark madman, and it shall be by a spear-point he will die.

He seized my psalter in his hand,
he cast it into the full lake,
Christ brought it to me without a blemish,
so that no worse was the psalter.

A day and a night in the full lake, nor was the speckled-white [book] the worse;
through the will of God's Son an otter gave it to me again.

As for the psalter that he seized in his hand,
I bequeath to the race of Colman that it will be bad for the race of fair Colman the day they shall behold the psalter.

Stark-naked he has come here to wring my heart, to chase me;
on that account God will cause that Suibhne shall ever naked be.

Eorann, daughter of Conn of Ciannacht, strove to hold him by his cloak;
my blessing on Eorann therefor,
and my curse on Suibhne.”

Thereupon Ronan came to Magh Rath to make peace between Domnall son of Aodh, and Congal Claon son of Scannlan,
but he did not succeed.

Howbeit, the cleric used to be taken each day as a guarantee between them that nobody would be slain from the time the fighting was stopped until it would be again permitted.

Suibhne, however, used to violate cleric's guarantee of protection inasmuch as every peace and truce which Ronan would make Suibhne would break,
for he used to slay a man before the hour fixed for combat each day,

after the battle-hosts had met.

Howbeit, they felt certain it was because of Ronan's curse that there were no tidings of his fate.

Suibhne in the yew-tree above them heard what they spoke,

and he said:

tháinig díorma den arm agus chruinníodar timpeall air.

When the men heard Suibhne reciting the verses,

they recognized him, and urged him to trust them.

He said that he would never do so.

Then, as they were closing round the tree,

Suibhne rose out of it very lightly and nimbly

(and went) to Cell Riagain in Tir Conaill

where he perched on the old tree of the church.

It chanced that it was at that tree Domnall, son of Aedh, and his army were after the battle, until Domnall himself recognized him,

whereupon he said:

“It is Suibhne, king of Dal Araidhe, whom Ronan cursed the day the battle was fought.

Good in sooth is the man who is there,” said he,

“and if he wished for treasures and wealth he would obtain them from us if only he would trust us.

“that the remnant of Congal’s people are thus,

Leis sin dúirt Dónall an laoi seo:

for both good and great were the ties that bound me to Congal before undertaking the battle, and good moreover was the counsel of Colum Cille to that youth himself when he went with Congal to ask an army from the king of Alba against
me”;
whereupon Domnall uttered the lay:

Is go dtí an áit seo a théadh gealta Éireann nuair a bhí a mbliain gealtachta curtha isteach acu

mar gurbh áit mhór aoibhnis dóibh i gcónai
an gleann céanna.

Mar is amhlaidh atá Gleann Bolcáin agus ceithre doirse ag an ngaoith ann agus coill ró-álann rí-thaitneamhach

agus toibreacha *taobh*ghlana agus fuaráin

Tá, leis, srutháin ghléineacha gainimhe ann agus biolar barrghlas agus fochlacht fada crochta os cionn uisce.

Tá chomh maith mórchuid samhaidh, siomsán agus lusbhian ann i dteannta biorragán,

caora, *creamh,

till he reached ever-delightful Glen Bolcain.

It is there the madmen of Ireland used to go when their year in madness was complete, that glen being ever a place of great delight for madmen.

For it is thus Glen Bolcain is:

it has four gaps to the wind,

likewise a wood very beautiful, very pleasant, and clean-banked wells and cool springs,

and sandy, clear-water streams,

and green-topped watercress and brooklime bent and long on their surface.

Many likewise are its sorrels, its wood-sorrels, its lus-bian and its biorragan,

its berries, and its wild garlic,

a mhelle ocus a miodhbhun
ocus áirnidhe dubha ocus a dercain donna.

Bhíodh fós na gealta ag tuargain a chéile féachaint cé gheobhadh an biolar is fearr agus rogha na leapacha sa ghleann sin.

its melle, and its miodhbhun, its black sloes and its brown acorns.
The madmen moreover used to smite each other
for the pick of watercress of that glen and for the choice of its couches.

D'han Suibhne tamall mór sa ghleann sin.
Tharla dó oíche amháin a bheith ar a leaba ar bharr crainn droighin lán d'eidhneán a bhí sa ghleann.

Bhí sé deachair air cur suas leis mar leaba, óir gach cor agus casadh dá dtugadh sé théadhbh cith de dhealga na sceithe ann

Suibhne also remained for a long time in that glen until he happened one night to be on the top of a tall ivy-clad hawthorn tree which was in the glen.

It was hard for him to endure that bed,
for at every twist and turn he would give,
a shower of thorns off the hawthorn would stick in him,

co mbíttis ag tolladh ocus ag treagh dadh a thaoibh ocus ag comhghuin a chnis.

Roaitherraigh Suibne iarum asin leabaidh sin dochum ionaidh ele.

As amhlaidh éimh robhúi an t-ionadhsin

Adráigh iaromh go héneirt anfann agus bhíodar ag tolladh agus ag treá a thaoibh agus a chnis.

D'athraigh sé iar sin go hionad eile.

Anseo sea bhí mothar-mhuine mhórdhriseach mhíndeilgneach agus géag shingil droighin ag fás ina haonar aníos tríd.

Shocraigh Suibne é féin ar bharr an chrainn ach bhí an ghéag chomh géar sin gur shléacht agus gur lúb sí faoi gur thit go tubaisteach tríd an muine go talamh.

Níor fágadh orlach de,

ó bhaithis a chinn go bonn a chos,

gan gearradh gan stolladh.

D'éirigh sé ansin agus go cromtha faonlag

so that they were piercing and rending his side and wounding his skin.

Suibne thereupon changed from that bed to another place, where there was a dense thicket of great briars with fine thorns and a single protruding branch of blackthorn growing alone up through the thicket.

Suibne settled on the top of that tree,

but so slender was it that it bowed and bent under him, so that he fell heavily through the thicket to the ground, and there was not as much as an inch from his sole to the crown of his head that was not wounded and reddened.

He then rose up, strengthless and feeble, ocus dothoed trésan muine amach,

co n-ébairt:

“Mo chubhais éimh,” ar sé,

“as deacair an bheatha so d’fhulang tar éis saoil,”

agus d’raithris sé an laoi seo síos:

and came out through the thicket,

whereupon he said:

“My conscience,” said he,

“it is hard to endure this life after a pleasant one,

and a year to last night I have been leading this life,”

whereupon he uttered the lay:

without sword, without spear.

Without the company of women;
save brooklime of warrior-bands — a pure fresh meal — watercress is our desire.

Without a foray with a king,

Ar eachaibh go hán,
i mbeathaidh gan bhrón, ar mo ríocht fé Rath
bhíos im' rí maith móir.

Without a house right full,
without the converse of generous men, without the title of king,
without drink, without food.

Alas that I have been parted here from my mighty, armed host, a bitter madman in the glen,
bereft of sense and reason.

Without being on a kingly circuit but rushing along every path;
that is the great madness,
O King of Heaven of saints.

Without accomplished musicians, without the converse of women,
without bestowing treasures;
it has caused my death, O revered Christ.

Though I be as I am to-night, there was a time
when my strength was not feeble over a land that was not bad.

On splendid steeds,
in life without sorrow,
in my auspicious kingship
I was a good, great king.

Bheith mar táim ina dhiaidh im' bhochtán gan bhrí

i nGleann Bolcáin bán.

An sceach nach máoth barr

Ar fáinneáil go fior
cé im' shaor-fhear ba séimh, is mé im' dhíol trua,

After that, to be as I am through selling Thee, O revered Christ, poor wretch am I, without power, in the Glen of bright Bolcan.

The hawthorn that is not soft-topped has subdued me, has pierced me;
the brown thorn-bush
has nigh caused my death.

The battle of Congal with fame,
to us it was doubly piteous;
on Tuesday was the rout;
more numerous were our dead than our living.

A-wandering in truth,
though I was noble and gentle,
I have been sad and wretched a year to last night.”

Section 20

D'fhan sé amhlaidh i nGleann Bolcáin.

Ag tráth áirithe thóg sé é féin in airde san aer agus thug aghaidh ar Chluain Cille ar theorainn Thír Chonaill is Thír Eoghain.

Chuaigh sé ansin go himeall an tobair mar a bhfuair sé biolar agus uisce dó féin * an oíche sin*.

Ina dhiaidh sin, chuaigh sé isteach i seanchrann na cille.
B'é b'airchinneach ar an gcill sin, Fáibhlean, de mhuintir Bhrú Mhic Deá.

Tháinig stoirm *ábal*mhór an oíche sin, rud a chuir isteach go mór ar Shuibhne

In that wise he remained in Glen Bolcain until at a certain time he raised himself up (into the air)

and went to Cluain Cille
on the border of Tir Conaill and Tir Boghaine.

He went then to the brink of the well where he had for food that night watercress and water.

Thereafter he went into the old tree of the church.
The erenach of the church was Faibhlen of the family of Brughach, son of Deaghadh.

That night there came an exceeding great storm
so that the extent of the night's misery affected Suibhne greatly,

ocus adbert-somh:

“Trúagh ámh,” ar sé, “nach air Muigh Rath rommharbadh-sa

resíu nobheinn isin deacair-si”;

go n-ébairt an laoi[dh] annso síosana go léig:

go ndúirt:

“Is trua go deimhin nár maraíodh mé ar Mhaigh Rath

mar nár ghá dom an cruatan mó� seo a fhulaingt,”

agus dúirt an laoi seo síos:

and he said:

“Sad indeed is it that I was not slain at Magh Rath

rather than that I should encounter this hardship”;

whereupon he uttered this lay:

Suibhne of Ros Earcain is my name,
the crazy madman am I.

I rest not when night comes,
my foot frequents no trodden way,
I bide not here for long,
the bonds of terror come upon me.

My goal lies beyond the teeming main, voyaging the prow-abounding sea;
fear has laid hold of my poor strength,
I am the crazy one of Glen Bolcain.

Frosty wind tearing me, already snow has wounded me,
the storm bearing me to death
from the branches of each tree.

le gleorán Chille Cua.

An ghin ag Ros Earcach, ní thig air imní ná olcas,
’sé thug mé gan neartán bheith le sneachta go nocttach.”

Grey branches have wounded me, they have torn my hands;
the briars have not left the making of a girdle for my feet.

There is a palsy on my hands, everywhere there is cause of confusion,
from Sliabh Mis to Sliabh Cuillenn, from Sliabh Cuillenn to Cuailgne.

Sad forever is my cry
on the summit of Cruachan Aighle, from Glen Bolcain to Islay, from Cenn Tire to Boirche.

Small is my portion when day comes,
it comes not as a new day’s right (?),
a tuft of watercress of Cluain Cille with Cell Cua’s cuckoo flower.

He who is at Ros Earcach, neither trouble nor evil shall come to him;
that which makes me strengthless is being in snow in nakedness.”

Section 22

Táinic Suibhne roimhe iarumh

ocus mná ag túargain lín

ocus ben ag breith leinb.

“Nior bhó cóir éimh,”

ar Suibhne,

“don mhnáoi aoine an Choimdedh do mhilledh.

Feibh thúairges an ben an líon,” ar sé,

Chuaigh Suibhne roimis ansin go dtáinig go dtí an chill ag Snámh-dhá-Éan ar an tSionainn

dá ngairtear Cluain Boireann inniu.

B’shin é an Aoine go beacht nuair a tháinig sé ann.

Bhí cléirigh na cille an uair sin ag déanamh an oird nóna;

bhí mná ag tuargain lín

agus bean ag breith linbh.

“Níor chóir

don mhnáoi Aoine an Choimhde a mhilleadh,”

arsa Suibhne.

“Mar a thuairgeas an bhean an líon,” ar sé,

So Suibhne fared forth

until he reached the church at Snamh dha En on the Shannon,

which is now called Cluain Boirenn;

he arrived there on a Friday, to speak precisely.

The clerics of the church were then fulfilling the office of nones;

women were beating flax,

and one was giving birth to a child.

“It is not meet, in sooth,”

said Suibhne,

“for the women to violate the Lord’s fast-day;

even as the woman beats the flax,” said he,

“as amhlaidh sin rotúairgeadh mo muinter-sa isin chath a Maigh Rath.”

Rochúalaidh-sion iarum clog an esparta aga bhúain, conadh ann adbert:

“Ba binne lem-sa éimh,” ar sé,

co n-ébert an laoidh:

“is amhlaidh sin a tuairgeadh mo mhuintirse sa chath i Maigh Rath.”

Chuala sé ansin clog na heaspartan á bhualadh agus dúirt:

“Ba bhinne liomsa go deimhin guth na gcuach a chlos ar bhruach na Banna do gach leith ná gric-gráic an chloig seo a chloisim anocht,” agus dúirt an laoi seo:

“so were my folk beaten in the battle of Magh Rath.”

He heard then the vesper-bell pealing,
whereupon he said:

“Sweeter indeed were it to me to hear the voices of the cuckoos on the banks of the Bann from every side than the grig-grraig of this bell which I hear tonight”;
and he uttered the lay:

than the grig-graig of the church-bell, is the cooing of the cuckoo of the Bann.

O woman, do not bring forth thy son
on a Friday,
the day whereon Suibhne Geilt eats not out of love for the King of righteousness.

As the women scutch the flax —
'tis true though 'tis I be heard — even so were beaten my folk in the battle of Magh Rath.

From Loch Diolair of the cliff to Derry Coluim Cille
it was not strife that I heard from splendid, melodious swans.

The belling of the stag of the desert above the cliffs in Siodhmuine Glinne —
there is no music on earth
in my soul but its sweetness.

A Chríost, a Chríost romchluine, a Chríost, a Chríost gan bine,

A Chríost, a Chríost, cluin mé,
A Chríost, a Chríost gan smál,
A Chríost, a Chríost bí id’ chara ’gam
Is ná scar mé ód’ bhinne.”

O Christ, O Christ, hear me,
O Christ, O Christ, without sin,
O Christ, O Christ, love me,

“My night in Cell Derfile
'tis it has broken my heart;
sad for me, O Son of my God, is parting from Dal Araidhe.

Ten hundred and ten warriors,
that was my host at Druim Fraoch, though I am without strength, O Son of God,
'twas I who was their leader in counsel.

Gloomy is my night to-night without serving-man, without camp;
not so was my night at Druim Damh,
I and Faolchu and Congal.

Alas, that I was detained for the tryst,
O my Prince of the glorious Kingdom, though I should not get any harm therefrom forever except this night.”

agus ní fhágadh sé an áit chéanna ach le huamhan agus le heagla.

D'fhan Suibhne ann an óiche sin agus an mhaidin dáir gcionn tháinig Loingseachán á lorg.

For seven whole years

Suibhne wandered over Ireland from one point to another

until one night he arrived at Glen Bolcain;

for it is there stood his fortress and his dwelling-place,

and more delightful was it to him to tarry and abide there

than in any other place in Ireland;

for thither would he go from every part of Ireland,

nor would he leave it except through fear and terror.

Suibhne dwelt there that night, and on the morrow morning Loingseachan came seeking him.

Deir daoine áirithe gur mac máthar dó ab ea Loingseachán, daoine eile a déarfadh gurbh é a leasdeartháir é ach ba chuma cé acu

óir ba mhór é a imní i dtaobh Shuibhne

mar gurb é Loingseachán a thug thar n-ais é na trí huaire a chuaigh sé le gealtacht.

Bhí Loingseachán á lorg an turas sin sa ghleann agus thug faoi deara lorg a choise in aice an tsrutháin mar ar ghnách leis biolar a chaitheamh.

Fuair sé ann freisin na tuigí

a bhriseadh faoina chosa

Some say that Loingseachan was Suibhne's mother's son, others that he was a foster-brother,

but, whichever he was,

his concern for Suibhne was great,

for he (Suibhne) went off three times in madness and thrice he brought him back.

This time Loingseachan was seeking him in the glen,

and he found the track of his feet by the brink of the stream of which he was wont to eat the watercress.

He found also the branches that used to break under his feet ag aitherrach do bharr an chroind for aroile.

agus é ag athrú ó bharr crainn go ceann eile.

as he changed from the top of one tree to another.

and there he heard Loingseachan's snore;
whereupon he uttered this lay:

In summer amid the herons of Cuailgne, among packs of wolves when winter comes,
at other times under the crown of a wood;
not so the man by the wall.

Happy Glen Bolcain, fronting the wind, around which madmen of the glen call,
woe is me, I sleep not there;
more wretched am I than the man by the wall.”

Tar éis an laoi sin a chur de tháinig sé an oíche dár gcionn go muileann Loingseacháin.

Bhí seanbhean ag coiméad súil ar an áit sin.
B’í sin Lonnág,

iníon Duibh Dhithribh, máthair mhná Loingseacháin.

Tháinig Suibhne isteach chuici

agus thug sí míreanna beaga bia dó.

Thagadh sé go minic ar an gcuma sin ina dhaidh sin chun an mhuilinn.

Lá amháin chuaigh Loingseachán sa tóir air

nuair a chonaic sé in aice an mhuilinn é.

Labhair sé leis an gcailleach, le Lonnág, máthair a mhná.

“Ar tháinig Suibhne chun an mhuilinn, a bhean?” arsa Loingseachán.

After that lay

he came the next night to Loingseachan’s mill which was being watched over by one old woman, Lonnog, daughter of Dubh Dithribh, mother of Loingseachan’s wife.

Suibhne went into the house to her and she gave him small morsels, and for a long time in that manner he kept visiting the mill.

One day Loingseachan set out after him,

when he saw him by the mill-stream, and he went to speak to the old woman, that is,

his wife’s mother, Lonnog.

“Has Suibhne come to the mill, woman?” said Loingseachan.

“Robúi aréir co déidhenach sunn,” ar an chaillech.

Rogabh iarum Loingseachán ceirt na caillighe uime

“Bhí sé anseo go déanach aréir,” ar sise.

Ar chlos sin dó, chuir Loingseacháin uime éadach na mná agus d’fhan sa mhuileann ina diaidh.
Tháinig Suibhne an oíche sin go dtí an muileann agus d’aithin sé Loingseachán.

Ach a bhfuair Suibhne radharc ar a shúile thug sé sciurd obann uaidh

agus léim amach trí fhuinneog dhíon an tí agus dúirt:

“A Loingseacháin, is trua mar atá tú im’ dhiaidh, im’ ruaigeadh óm áit

agus ó gach ionad a thaitníonn liom in Éirinn;

agus ó nach ligean Rónán dom muinín a bheith agam asat

“He was here last night,” said the woman.

Loingseachan then put on the woman’s garment and remained in the mill after her;
that night Suibhne came to the mill and he recognised Loingseachan.

When he saw his eyes
he sprang away from him at once

out through the skylight of the house, saying:

“Pitiful is your pursuit of me, Loingseachan, chasing me from my place and from each spot dearest to me in Ireland;

and as Ronan does not allow me to trust you,

as liosda lenamhnach dhuit ueith dom ocus dorinne an laoidh so ann:

is liosta leanúnach duit bheith dom leanúint.”

Agus do rinne an laoi seo ann:

it is tiresome and importunate of you to be following me”;

and he made this lay:

'tis he who has put me in a sorry plight.

I made the luckless cast
from the midst of the battle at Ronan;
it pierced the precious bell which was on the cleric’s breast.

As I hurled the splendid cast
from the midst of the battle at Ronan, said the fair cleric: ‘Thou hast leave to go with the birds.’

Thereafter I sprang up into the air above;
in life I have never leaped
a single leap that was lighter.

Were it in the glorious morning,
on the Tuesday following the Monday, none would be prouder than I am by the side of a warrior of my folk.

A marvel to me is that which I see,
O Thou that hast shaped this day;
the woman's garment on the floor,
two piercing eyes of Loingseachan.”

“agus ná bí do mo chrá níos sia;

téirigh go dtí do thig féin agus rachadsa romham go dtí an baile mar a “Sad is the disgrace

said he;

“and do not continue annoying me further,

B’iad san Guaire Mac Congail mic Scannláin agus Eochaíd mac Condlo mic Scannláin.

Ghluais Suibhne roimhe go dtí an baile mar a raibh Eorann.

Bhí Guaire amuigh ag seilg an lá sin.

Ba é treo a ghabh sé ná ó thuaidh go dtí an bhearna i Sliabh Fuaid

agus thart ar Sgirig Chinn Ghlinne agus thart ar Éadan Tairbh.

Bhí a longfort thart ar Gleann Bolgáin
— a nglaoitear Gleann Chiach air inniu — i machaire Chinéil Ainmireach.

Ansin shuigh an gealt síos ar fhárdoras an bhotha ina raibh Eorann

agus dúirt:

“An cuimhin leat, a iníon,” ar sé, which Suibhne had abandoned,

viz.: Guaire, son of Congal, son of Scannlan, and Eochaíd, son of Condlo, son of Scannlan.

Suibhne proceeded to the place in which Eorann was.

Guaire had gone to the chase that day, and the route he took was to the pass of Sliabh Fuaid

and by Sgirig Cinn Glinne and Ettan Tairbh.

His camp was beside Glen Bolcain

— which is called Glenn Chiach to-day — in the plain of Cinel Ainmirech.

Then the madman sat down upon the lintel of the hut in which Eorann was,

whereupon he said:

“Do you remember, lady,

agus dúirt Suibhne,
agus Eorann á fhreagairt, an laoi seo:

the great love we gave to each other what time we were together?
Easy and pleasant it is for you now,
but not so for me”;
whereupon Suibhne said,
and Eorann answered him (as follows):

ní iarrann sibh bhur seanchara.”

Suibhne:

“At ease art thou, bright Eorann, at the bedside with thy lover;
not so with me here,
long have I been restless.

Once thou didst utter, O great Eorann,
a saying pleasing and light, that thou wouldst not survive parted one day from Suibhne.

To-day, it is readily manifest, thou thinkest little of thy old friend;
warm for thee on the down of a pleasant bed, cold for me abroad till morn.”

Eorann:

“Welcome to thee, thou guileless mad one,
thou art most welcome of the men of the earth;
though at ease am I, my body is wasted since the day I heard of thy ruin.”

Suibhne:

“More welcome to thee is the king’s son who takes thee to feast without sorrow;
he is thy chosen wooer;
you seek not your old friend.”

“Ce nombéredh mac an rígh

“Ní conair do deghmhnáoi dhil, Suibhne sunn ar sliocht imnidh fuar mo leaptha ag Ard Abhla, nídot terca m' fhúaradh bha.

Córa duit serc agus grádh don fhior 'gá táoi th'ænarán iná do gheilt ghairbh ghortaigh uathaigh, omhnaigh, urnochtaigh.”

“Monúar ámh, a gheilt ghníomhach, do ueth éittigh imshníomhach, saoth lem do chnes rochlói dath,

Eorann:

“Bíodh go mbéarfadh mac an rí go tithe óil mé gan imní leat, a fhir taobh lem' chroi.

Dá dtabharfaí mo rogha dhom d'fhearaibh Éireann is Alban, fearr liom id' chomhair gan chol ar uisce agus ar bhiolar.”

Suibhne:

“Ní conair do dhea-mhnáoi dhil Suibhne anseo ar sliocht imní, fuar mo leaba ag Ard Abhla ní tearc mo leapacha fuara.

Córa dhuit searc agus grá, don fhear gur tú a aonghrá ná go gheilt gharbh ghortach, uathach, uamhnach, urnochtach.”

Eorann:

“Monuar, ámh, a gheilt ghníomhach,
do bheith gan teach imníoch, saoth liom do chneas aondatha, dreasa is draighin do do réabadh.”

Eorann:

“Though the king's son were to lead me to blithe banqueting-halls, I had liefer sleep in a tree's narrow hollow beside thee, my husband, could I do so.

If my choice were given me of the men of Erin and Alba, I had liefer bide sinless with thee on water and on watercress.”

Suibhne:

“No path for a beloved lady is that of Suibhne here on the track of care;
cold are my beds at Ard Abhla, my cold dwellings are not few.

More meet for thee to bestow love and affection on the man with whom thou art alone than on an uncouth and famished madman, horrible, fearful, stark-naked.”

Eorann:

“O toiling madman, 'tis my grief that thou art uncomely and dejected;
I sorrow that thy skin has lost its colour, briars and thorns rending thee.”

“Ní dá chairiughadh dhamh ort,
a mháothainder mháothéttrocht, Críost mac Muire, mór da cacht, é domrad a n-éccomhnart.”

“Robadh maith lem ar mbeth aræn co ttigeadh clúmh ar ar ttaobh, co sirfinn soirchi is doirchi let gach lá is gach énoidhche.”

“Adaigh dhamh-sa a mBoirchi bhinn, ránac Túath Inbhir áloinn, rosirius Magh Fáil co fraigh, tairlius do Cill Uí Suánaigh.”

S.

Suibhne:

“Ní dá choiriú dhom ort
a mhaoth-ainnir, is geal lem’ chroí, Críost mac Muire, mo dhíth, is é d’fhág mise gan neart.”

Eorann:

“Ba mhaith liom sinn araon go dtigeadh clúmh ar ár dtaobh, go siúlfainn gile is doircheacht leat gach lá is gach aon oíche.”

Suibhne:

“Oíche dhomhsa i mBoirche bhinn, ráinig mé Tuath Inbhir álainn, thaistealaíos Magh Fáil ar fad, tharla dom i gCill Uí Shuanáigh.”

Suibhne:

“I blame thee not for it,
thou gentle, radiant woman;
Christ, Son of Mary — great bondage —
He has caused my feebleness.”

Eorann:

“I would fain that we were together,
and that feathers might grow on our bodies;
in light and darkness I would wander with thee each day and night.”

Suibhne:

“One night I was in pleasant Boirche,
I have reached lovely Tuath Inbhir,
I have wandered throughout Magh Fail,
I have happened on Cell Ui Suanaigh.”

amhail ba mhinic leis.

Nior staon sé den réim sin gur shroich sé Ros Bearaigh roimh oíche

— an céad chill inar mhoilligh sé tar éis cath Maighe Rath.

Isteach leis sa chrann iúir a bhí sa chill.

Muireadach Mac Earca a bhí ina airchinneach ar an gcill an uair sin.

Tharla go raibh a bhean siúd ag dul thar an iúr go bhfaca sí an gealt ann

No sooner had he finished than the army swarmed into the camp from every quarter,

whereupon he set off in his headlong flight, as he had often done.

He halted not in his career

until before the fall of night he arrived at Ros Bearaigh

— the first church at which he tarried after the battle of Magh Rath —

and he went into the yew-tree which was in the church.

Muireadach mac Earca was erenach of the church at the time,

and his wife happened to be going past the yew

when she saw the madman in it;

ocus tuc aithne fair guruó é Suibhne robhúi

agus d'aithin sí gurbh é Suibhne a bhí ann

agus dúirt:

“Tar anuas den chrann, a rí Dhal Araaidhe, ní baol duit an t-aon bhean amháin atá anseo.”

Chun breith ar an ngealt

agus le cleas a imirt air

a dúirt sí sin.

“Ní thiocfad go deimhin,” arsa Suibhne,

“mar gheobhadh Loingseachán agus a bhean chugam;

bhí tráth ann

ab fhusa duit mé a aithint ná inniu”.

Agus dúirt sé na ranna seo:

she recognized that it was Suibhne was there and said to him:

“Come out of the yew, king of Dal Araaidhe;
there is but one woman before you here.”

She said so

in order to seize the madman, and to deceive and beguile him.

“I will not go indeed,” said Suibhne,

“lest Loingseachan and his wife come to me,

for there was a time

when it would have been easier for you to recognize me than it is to-day”;

whereupon he uttered these staves:

Section 34

“O woman, who dost recognize me with the points of thy blue eyes, there was a time when my aspect was better in the assembly of Dal Araidhe.

I have changed in shape and hue since the hour I came out of the battle;
I was the slender Suibhne of whom the men of Erin had heard.

Bide thou with thy husband and in thy house,
I shall not tarry in Ros Bearaigh;
until holy Judgment we shall not foregather,
I and thou, O woman.”

D'éirigh sé den chrann ansin go lúfar éadrom agus chuaigh roimhe go ráinig sa seanchrann ag Ros Earcáin,

óir bhí trí dhúnáras aige ina thír féin inar
ghnách leis cónaí,

mar atá, Teach mic Ninnedha, Cluain Creamha agus Ros Earcáin.

D'fhan sé sa chrann iúir sin ar feadh sé seachtaine gan aon duine á thabhairt faoi deara.

Ach ar deireadh fuarthas amach an áit chónaithe

agus chuaigh maithe agus móruaisle Dhál Araidhe i gcomhairle

féachaint cé ba chóir a chur á ghabháil.

Dúirt cách gurbh é Loingseachán ba chóir a chur ann.

He emerged then from the tree lightly and nimblly,

and went on his way until he reached the old tree at Ros Earcain.

(For he had three dwellings in his own country in which he was wont to reside, viz.: Teach mic Ninnedha, Cluain Creamha, and Ros Earcain).

Thereafter for a fortnight and a month he tarried in the yew-tree without being perceived;

but at length his place and dwelling were discovered,

and the nobles of Dal Araidhe took counsel

as to who should go to seize him.

Everyone said that it was Loingseachan who should be sent.

agus chuaigh sé roimhe gur bhain amach an crann iúir ina raibh Suibhne.
Chonaic sé an gheilt ar an gcraobh os a chionn.

“Trua sin, a Shuibhne,” ar sé, “gurb olc an chríoch atá ort, and he went along until he came to the yew in which Suibhne was,

whereupon he beheld the madman on the branch above him.

“Sad is it, Suibhne,” said he,
“that your last plight should be thus,
without food, without drink,
without raiment, like any bird of the air, after having been in garments of silk and satin

Suibhne,

“sin é a bhí i ndán dúinn.
Ach abair, an bhfuil aon scéala agat dom óm like unto any miserable bird going from wilderness to wilderness.”

“Cease now, Loingseachan,” said Suibhne; “that is what was destined for us;
but have you tidings for me of my country?”

“I have in sooth,” said Loingseachan, “for your father is dead.”
“That has seized me . . .”, said he.

“Do mháthair dono dh’ ég,” ar an giolla.

“Your mother is also dead,” said the young man.

“Rohanadh dom oirchisecht a ufecht sa,” ar sé.

“Anois tá deireadh le haon trua dhom,” ar sé.

“Now all pity for me is at an end,” said he.

“Marbh do bráthair,” ar Loingseachán.

“Dead is your brother,” said Loingseachan.

“Toll mo thaobh don leith sin,” ar Suibhne.

“Gaping is my side on that account,” said Suibhne.

“Marbh th’ingen,” ar Loingseachán.

“Dead is your daughter,” said Loingseachan.

“Snáthad chroidhe dano éiningen,” ar Suibhne.

“Snáthaid chroi bás aon iníne,” arsa Suibhne.

“The heart’s needle is an only daughter,” said Suibhne.

“Marbh do mac atbeiredh ‘a phopa’ friot,” ar Loingseachán.

“Dead is your son who used to call you ‘daddy’,” said Loingseachan.

“Fíor ón,” ar sé, “as é sin an banna dobheir an fer co lár”;

“Ó, Sin é an buille a leagann an duine ar láir,” ar seisean

“True,” said he, “that is the drop (?) which brings a man to the ground;”

Loingseachán ocus Suibhne:

agus dúirt Loingseachán agus Suibhne an laoi seo eatarthu:

whereupon they, even Loingseachan and Suibhne, uttered this lay between them:

“A Suibhne a Sléibh na nEach n-ard, robsat fuileach faobharghargc, ar Chríost rodchuir a ccarcra

Loingseachán:

“A Shuibhne ó Shliabh na nEach n-ard, tusa led lann faobhargharg, ar son Chríost a chuir i gcarair tú déan comhrá led chomh-dhalta.

Éist liomsa má chluinir mé
a rí uasail, a ardtiarna, go n-inse mé go mín

Ní beo do thír de do éis,
an fáth gur tháing dá fhaisnéis, marbh do bhráthair clúiteach, marbh d'athair is do mháthair.”

Suibhne:

“Más marbh mo mháthair mhín is deacraide dom dul dom' thír, cian ó char sí mo chorp, scair sí uaim a comhbhá.

Baoth comhairle gach mic mhir nach maireann a shinsir aige, amhail is crom craobh fé chnónna

Loingseachan:

“O Suibhne from lofty Sliabh na nEach, thou of the rough blade wert given to wounding;
for Christ's sake, who hath put thee in bondage, grant converse with thy foster-brother.

Hearken to me if thou hearest me,
O splendid king, O great prince,
so that I may relate gently to thee tidings of thy good land.

There is life for none in thy land after thee;
it is to tell of it that I have come;
dead is thy renowned brother there, dead thy father and thy mother.”

Suibhne:

“If my gentle mother be dead, harder is it for me to go to my land;
'tis long since she has loved my body;
she has ceased to pity me.

Foolish the counsel of each wild youth whose elders live not;
like unto a branch bowed under nuts;
whoso is brotherless has a gaping side.”

“Atá urbaidh oile ann

“Nocha legar laoigh co búabhb

Loingeachán:

“Tá tubaiste eile ann
a chaointear ag fearaibh Éireann, cé garbh do thaobh is do throigh, marbh do bhean chaomh ded chumha.”

Suibhne:

“Teach do bheith gan mnáoi,
is iomramh loinge gan stiúir,
is teolaíocht clúimhe le cneas, nó adú gan teannáil.”

Loingeachán:

“Do chúala scéal uafar ard
a raibh uime gol glégharg, is dorn um dheatach duit é táir gan siúr, a Shuibhne.”

Suibhne:

“Seanbhriathar seo, cé searbh, ní ceol im’ chluasa sin,
fanann grian chiúin ar gach cláí, gránn siúr d’éagmais ceana.”

Loingeachán:

“Ní ligtear laoi le buaibh againne in Araidhe fuar, ós marbh d’iníon chaomh an cheana mar aon le mac do dheirfearach.”

Loingeachan:

“There is another calamity there which is bewailed by the men of Erin, though uncouth be thy side and thy foot, dead is thy fair wife of grief for thee.”

Suibhne:

“For a household to be without a wife is rowing a rudderless boat,
'tis a garb of feathers to the skin,
'tis kindling a single fire.”

Loingeachan:

“I have heard a fearful and loud tale around which was a clear, fierce wail,
'tis a fist round smoke, however, thou art without sister, O Suibhne.”

Suibhne:

“A proverb this, bitter the . . . —
it has no delight for me —
the mild sun rests on every ditch, a sister loves though she be not loved.”

Loingeachan:

“Calves are not let to cows amongst us in cold Araidhe since thy gentle daughter, who has loved thee died, likewise thy sister's son.”

“Mac mo shethar is mo chú, nocham ttréigfittís ar bhú,
as táthad uilc re himnedh, snáthad chroidhe éninghen.”

“Atá sgél eile co mbloidh,

Suibhne:

“Mac mo shiúir is mo chú

Loingseachán:

“Tá scéal mór eile fós,
is leasc liom a insint, fir Araidhe, go huile atáid ag caoineadh d’aonmhic.”

Suibhne:

“Is é sin an titim mhór a bheir an fear go talamh mac beag a deireadh ‘popa’ do bheith anois gan anam.

Thug sin chugat mé den chraobh, beag a ndearna mé de mhísc, ní fhéadaim fulaingt thusa den bheart ó chuala uait tásc m’áonmhic.”

Loingseachán:

“Ó do shroichis, a laoich láin, idir dhá láimh Loingseacháin, maireann do mhuintir uile,
a ua Eachach Sálbhuidhe.

Suibhne:

“My sister’s son and my hound, they would not forsake me for wealth,
’tis adding loss to sorrow;
the heart’s needle is an only daughter.”

Loingseachan:

“There is another famous story — loth am I to tell it — meetly are the men of the Arada bewailing thy only son.”

Suibhne:

“That is the renowned drop (?) which brings a man to the ground, that his little son who used to say ‘daddy’
should be without life.

It has called me to thee from the tree, scarce have I caused enmity,
I cannot bear up against the blow since I heard the tidings of my only son.”

Loingseachan:

“Since thou hast come, O splendid warrior, within Loingseachan’s hands,
all thy folk are alive,
O scion of Eochu Salbuidhe.

Bí it tocht, tigeadh do chiall,

A.S.

Bí id' thost, tagadh do chiall thoir atá do theach is ní thiar, b'uasal saor tú, a Shuibhne.”

Be still, let thy sense come, in the east is thy house, not in the west,
far from thy land thou hast come hither,
this is the truth, O Suibhne.

More delightful deemest thou to be amongst deer in woods and forests
than sleeping in thy stronghold in the east on a bed of down.

Better deemest thou to be on a holly-branch beside the swift mill's pond, than to be in choice company with young fellows about thee.

If thou wert to sleep in the bosom of hills
to the soft strings of lutes, more sweet wouldst thou deem under the oak-wood the belling of the brown stag of the herd.

Thou art fleeter than the wind across the valley, thou art the famous madman of Erin,
brilliant in thy beauty, come hither, O Suibhne, thou wast a noble champion.”

thit sé anuas den iúir.

D'iaigh Loingseachán a dhá láimh timpeall air
agus chuir cuibhreacha ar a lámha.

Dúirt sé leis ansin go raibh a mhuintir go léir beo

agus thug leis é go dtí an áit mar a raibh maiithe Dhál Araidhe.

Thugadar siúd glais agus géibheanna leo le cur ar Shuibhne,

agus thugadar ar láimh do Loingseachán é ar feadh sé seachtaine.

Thug seisean Suibhne leis

When Suibhne heard tidings of his only son,

he fell from the yew,

whereupon Loingseachan closed his arms around him

and put manacles on him.

He then told him that all his people lived;

and he took him to the place in which the nobles of Dal Araidhe were.

They brought with them locks and fetters to put on Suibhne,

and he was entrusted to Loingseachan to take him with him

agus fiú a chruth agus a dhealbh féin.

Baineadh na cuibhreacha de ansin

agus léiríodh a dhealramh Ríoga.

Bhí aimsir an fhómhair tagtha anois

Fágadh Suibhne i seomra codlata and the nobles of the province were coming and going during that time;

and at the end of it

his sense and memory came to him, likewise his own shape and guise.

They took his bonds off him, and his kingship was manifest.

Harvest-time came then,
and one day Loingseachan went with his people to reap.

Suibhne was put in Loingseachan's bedroom
after his bonds were taken off him, and his sense had come back to him.

“Mallacht for do bhél, a chailleach,” ar Suibhne,	“Mallacht ar do bhéal, a chailleach,” arsa Suibhne	“A curse on your mouth, hag,” said Suibhne;
“as olc a n-abra,	“is olc a ndeir tú;	“ill is what you say;

“Nocha brath edir,” ar sí, “acht fírinne”;
ocus adúbairt Suibhne:

“A bhean,” ar sé, “is olc an mhaise duit é bheith im’ bhrath agus im’ bhiathadh.”

“Ní brath é,” ar sise, “ach an fhírinne.”
Agus dúirt Suibhne:

“O woman,” said he, “it is hateful that you should be betraying and luring me.”

“It is not betrayal at all but truth”;
and Suibhne said:

“A chailleach an mhuilinn thall, cid duit mo chor ar imrall?
nach meabhall deit tré bháigh mban mo brath agus mo biathadh?”

“Nocha misi dobhraith thú,

“Dá madh misi is go madh mé

A chaillech.

Suibhne:

“A chailleach an mhuilinn thall
tuige mo chur ar iomrall?
nách meabhall duit trí bhá ban mé bhrath agus mé mhealladh?”

An Chailleach:

“Ní mise a bhraith tú,
a Shuibhne, cé caomh do chlú, acht fearta Rónáin ó Neamh a chuir tú id’ ghealt le gealtaibh.”

Suibhne:

“Dá mba mise, is go mba mé
ba rí ar Dhál Araidhe, ba chomartha sin ar dhorn sa smig;
ní chaithfeá coirm, a chailleach.”

Suibhne:

“O hag of yonder mill,
why shouldst thou set me astray?
is it not deceitful of thee that, through women,
I should be betrayed and lured?”

The hag:

“Tis not I who betrayed thee,
O Suibhne, though fair thy fame,
but the miracles of Ronan from Heaven which drove thee to madness among madmen.”

Suibhne:

“Were it myself, and would it were I,
that were king of Dal Araidhe
it were a reason for a blow across a chin;
thou shalt not have a feast, O hag.”

Section 39

“A chailleach,” ar sé,

“is mó� do dheacraibh fuarus-sa dá ufestá-sa é,

Rolincc-siomh iarumh léim tar colbha na tuilgi co ráinic cenn na hairidhni síos.

“Mo chubhuis éimh,” ar an chaillech,

“rolingfinn-si féin an léim sin.”

Roling sí ón fón ccuma céadna.

“A chailleach,” ar sé,

“is mó� iad na deachrachtaí a bhual liomsa dá mbeadh a fhios agat.

Is iomaí léim fiochmhar a thugas-sa ó chnoc go cnoc, ó dhún go dún, ó fhearrann go fearann, ó ghleann go gleann.”

“Ar son Dé,” arsa an chailleach,

“tóg ceann de léimeanna sin anois

a thób tú is tú id’ ghealt.”

Iar sin léim sé thar ráille na leapan

gur shroich deireadh an bhínse.

“Ar mo choinsias,” arsa an chailleach,

“d’fhéadfainn an léim sin a thabhairt mé fhéin.”

Agus rinne sí amhlaidh.

“O hag,” said he,

“great are the hardships I have encountered if you but knew;

many a dreadful leap have I leaped from hill to hill, from fortress to fortress,

from land to land, from valley to valley.”

“For God’s sake,” said the hag,

“leap for us now one of the leaps you used to leap when you were mad.”

Thereupon he bounded over the bed-rail

so that he reached the end of the bench.

“My conscience,” said the hag,

“I could leap that myself,”

and in the same manner she did so.

Roling-siomh léim eile dar forlés na bruighniu amach.

“Rolin[g]finn-si dono sin,” ar an chailleach, ocus roling fo cédóir.

Acht chena ba sedh a chumair.

Rosfir Suibhne cúig tríocha chéd Dhál Araide roimpe an lá sin co ráinic Glenn na nEachtach i Fidh Gaibhle ocus rolen sí é frisin ré sin.

Ó rothairis Suibhne ar barr craobhе urairde eidhnighe annsin, rothairis an chaillech ar crann eile ina fharradh;

a nderedh an fhóghamhair do sunnradh ind sin, conadh ann atchuala Suibhne gáir shealga na sochaidhe ind-imeal an fheadha.

Thóg Suibhne léim eile amach trí fhuinneog dhíon na bruíne.

“D’fhéadfainnse é sin a dhéanamh chomh maith,” arsa an chailleach, rud a dhein sí ar an bpointe.

Ach níl anseo ach achroimre.

An lá úd thaistil Shuibhne cúig tríocha céad Dhál Araide go ráinig go Gleann na nEachtach i bhFiodh Gaibhle agus lean an chailleach é an t-am ar fad.

Nuair a thuirling Suibhne ar bharr craobhе airde eidhneáin thuirling an chailleach ar chrann eile in aice leis.

Bhí deireadh an fhómhair go cruinn tagtha an tráth sin.

Go tobann chuala Suibhne gáir sheilge an tslua ar imeall na coille.

He took another leap out through the skylight of the hostel.

“I could leap that too,” said the hag, and straightway she leaped.

This, however, is a summary of it:

Suibhne travelled through five cantreds of Dal Araide that day until he arrived at Glenn na nEachtach in Fiodh Gaibhle, and she followed him all that time.

When Suibhne rested there on the summit of a tall ivy-branch, the hag rested on another tree beside him.

It was then the end of harvest-time precisely.

Thereupon Suibhne heard a hunting-call of a multitude in the verge of the wood.

“Gáir mórluaig so,” ar sé,

“ocus as iad Úi Faelán failte ann ag techt dom mharbadh-sa

a ndíogail Oiliolla Cédaigh

.i. rígh Ua bFaelán romharbhus-sa i ccath Muighe Rath.”

Atchúalaidhsiomh búriudh an doimh alla, ocus dorinni an laoidh ocus tuc testmolta crann Éirenn ós aird innte

ocus ag foraithmheadh araill dia dheacruibh ocus dia imshníomh budhdhéin;

go ndébairt annso:

“Sin gáir mhórshlua,” ar seisean,

“sin iad muintir Uibh Fhaoláin ag teacht chun mé a mharú,

ag baint díoltais amach as Oilill Céadach,

rí Uibh Fhaoláin, a mharaíos i gcath Maighe Rath.”

Chuala sé búirtheach an daimh alla

agus rinne sé an laoi seo síos ag moladh go hard crainn na hÉireann agus ag meabhrú a chuid cruatain agus anró fén

go ndúirt:

“This,” said he, “is the cry of a great host,

and they are the Ui Faelain coming to kill me

to avenge Oilill Cedach, king of the Ui Faelain, whom I slew in the battle of Magh Rath.”

He heard the bellowing of the stag, and he made a lay wherein he eulogized aloud the trees of Ireland, and, recalling some of his own hardships and sorrows,

he said:

Ill-hap by which I outraged
the honour of Ronan Finn, his miracles have troubled me,
his little bells from the church.

Ill-omened I found
the armour of upright Congal, his sheltering, bright tunic with selvages of gold.

It was a saying of each one of the valiant, active host:
'Let not escape from you through the narrow copse the man of the goodly tunic.'

'Wound, kill, slaughter,
let all of you take advantage of him;
put him, though it is great guilt,
on spit and on spike.'

bhí an t-ádh liom ann,
sula mbeinn go míshocair ag taisteal na mbeann.

The horsemen pursuing me across round Magh Cobha, no cast from them reaches me through my back.

Going through the ivy-trees —
I conceal it not, O warrior — like good cast of a spear
I went with the wind.

O little fawn, O little long-legged one,
I was able to catch thee riding upon thee
from one peak to another.

From Carn Cornan of the contests to the summit of Sliabh Niadh, from the summit of Sliabh Uillinne I reach Crota Cliach.

From Crota Cliach of assemblies to Carn Liffi of Leinster, I arrive before eventide
in bitter Benn Gulbain.

My night before the battle of Congal,
I deemed it fortunate,
before I restlessly
wandered over the mountain-peaks.

a stern race against the peak.

If I were to wander alone
the mountains of the brown world, better would I deem the site of a single hut in the Glen of mighty Bolcan.

Good its water pure-green,
good its clean, fierce wind,
good its cress-green watercress, best its tall brooklime.

Good its enduring ivy-trees,
good its bright, cheerful sallow,
good its yewy yews,
best its melodious birch.

If thou shouldst come, O Loingseachan, to me in every guise,
each night to talk to me,
perchance I would not tarry for thee.

I would not have tarried to speak to thee were it not for the tale which has wounded me — father, mother, daughter, son, brother, strong wife dead.

Dá ttisteá dom agallaimh ní budh fer[r]de leam, rosirfinn ria madanraidh sléibhti Boirchi benn.

Do mhuilenn an mheanmaráin domheilte do thúaith,
a thrúagháin, a thuirseacháin,
a Luingseacháin lúaith.

A chailleach an mhuilinn-si, cidh 'mongeibhe mh'eill?
mh' égnach duit itchluinim-si,
is tú amuigh ar an mbeinn.

A chailleach, a chuirchennach, an ragha for each?"
"Noraghainn, a thuirchennach, munam faicinn neach.

Dá ndeachar, a Shuibhneacháin, rob soraidh mo léim."
[S.]
"Dá ttóra-sa, a chaillcheacháin, ní ris sis slán céill."

Dá dtiocfá ag labhairt liom níorbh fhearrde liomsa sin do shiúlfainn roimh an maidneachan sléibhte Boirche beinn.

Do mhuileann min-mheilteach domheilte do thuaith,
a thruáin, a thuirseacháin,
a Loingseacháin luáith.

A chailleach an mhuilinn seo
cé go bhfaighir mé ar fail, ag magadh fúm a chluinim tú,
is tú amuigh ar an mbeinn.

A chailleach, a chorrcheannach, an rachfá ar each?"
An Chailleach:
"Do rachfainn, a ghliongarcheann, mura bhfeicfi mé ag neach.

Dá rachfainn, a Shuibhneacháin, ba shona mo léim."
Suibhne:
"Má théann tú, a chailleacháin nára slán agat do chéill."

If thou shouldst come to speak to me,
no better would I deem it;
I would wander before morn
the mountains of Boirche of peaks.

By the mill of the little floury one (?) thy folk has been ground, (?)
O wretched one, O weary one,
O swift Loingseachan.

O hag of this mill,
why dost thou take advantage of me?
I hear thee revile me,
even when thou art out on the mountain.

O hag, O round-headed one, (?) wilt thou go on a steed?"
The hag:
"I would go, O fool-head (?)
if no one were to see me.

O Suibhne, if I go,
may my leap be successful."
Suibhne:
"If thou shouldst come, O hag, mayst thou not dismount full of sense." (?)

“Ní cóir éimh a n-abraidh-si, a mhic Colmáin Chais, nach ferrdi mo mharcachus gan tuitim tar mh’ais?”

“As cóir éimh a n-abraim-si,
a chailleach gan chéill,
demhan agat th’aidhmilliudh, romillis fadhéin.”

“Nach ferrde let mh’ealadhain, a ghelt shaerrdha sheng, mo beth agat lenamain
a mullaighibh na mbenn?”

“Dosán eindhinn iomúallach

Suibhne:

“Is cóir ámh a n-abraimse,
a chailleach gan chéill,
deamhan do d’adhmhilleadh, do mhillis tú féin.”

An Chailleach:

“Nach fearrde leat m’ealaín, a gheilt shaorga sheang, mé bheith ag do leanúint
i mullaí na mbeann?”

Suibhne:

“Dosán eindhinn im-uallach dá mbeinnse ’na cheartmhullach, ní leomhfainn teacht as.

Teithim roimh na fuiseoga, sin é an tréanrithe teann, lingim tar na gasanna
a mullaí na mbeann.

The hag:

“In sooth, not just is what thou sayest, thou son of Colman Cas;
is not my riding better without falling back?”

Suibhne:

“Just, in sooth, is what I say,
O hag without sense;
a demon is ruining thee,
thou hast ruined thyself.”

The hag:

“Dost thou not deem my arts better, thou noble, slender madman,
that I should be following thee from the tops of the mountains?”

Suibhne:

“A proud ivy-bush
which grows through a twisted tree — if I were right on its summit,
I would fear to come out.

I flee before the skylarks —
'tis a stern, great race —
I leap over the stumps

When the proud turtle-dove rises for us,
quickly do I overtake it since my feathers have grown.

The silly, foolish woodcock when it rises for me
methinks 'tis a bitter foe,
the blackbird (too) that gives the cry of alarm.

Every time I would bound till I was on the ground so that I might see the little fox below a-gnawing the bones.

Beyond every wolf (?) among the ivy-trees swiftly would he get the advantage of me, so nimbly would I leap till I was on the mountain-peak.

Little foxes yelping
to me and from me,
wolves at their rending,
I flee at their sound.

They have striven to reach me,
coming in their swift course,
so that I fled before them to the tops of the mountains.

My transgression has come against me whatsoever way I flee;
'tis manifest to me from the pity shown me that I am a sheep without a fold.

The old tree of Cell Lughaidhe wherein I sleep a sound sleep;
more delightful in the time of Congal was the fair of plenteous Line.

There will come the starry frost which will fall on every pool;
I am wretched, straying, exposed to it on the mountain-peak.

The herons a-calling
in chilly Glenn Aighle, swift flocks of birds
coming and going.

I love not the merry prattle that men and women make:
sweeter to me is the warbling of the blackbird in the quarter in which it is.

I love not the trumpeting
I hear at early morn:
sweeter to me the squeal
of the badgers in Benna Broc.

I love not the horn-blowing so boldly I hear:
sweeter to me the belling of a stag of twice twenty peaks.

There is the material of a plough-team
from glen to glen:
each stag at rest
on the summit of the peaks.

Though many are my stags
from glen to glen,
not often is a ploughman's hand closing round their horns. (?)

The stag of lofty Sliabh Eibhlinne, the stag of sharp Sliabh Fuaid, the stag of Ella, the stag of Orry, the fierce stag of Loch Lein.

The stag of Seimhne, Larne's stag,
the stag of Line of the mantles,
the stag of Cuailgne, the stag of Conachail, the stag of Bairenn of two peaks.

O mother of this herd,
thy coat has become grey,
there is no stag after thee without two score antler-points.

i mullach do bheann.

Is mé Suibhne, sirtheachán, luath rithim tar gleann ní hé sin m'ainm dleathach mó is ainm dom Fear Beann.

Tiobreacha is fearr fuaireas-sa:
tobar Leithid Láin,
tobar is áille fionnuaire, fuarán Dhúine Máil.

Cé gur mór é m'imirce,
m'éadach inniu is gearr,
mé féin do-ní faire dhom
i mullach na mbeann.

A raithnech, a ruafhada,
do ruadh do chlóca,
níl leaba d'fhear fógartha
i ngabhalaibh do bheann.

Greater than the material for a little cloak thy head has turned grey;
if I were on each little point,
there would be a pointlet on every point.

Thou stag that comest lowing to me across the glen,
pleasant is the place for seats
on the top of thy antler-points.

I am Suibhne, a poor suppliant, swiftly do I race across the glen;
that is not my lawful name,
rather is it Fer benn.

The springs I found best:
the well of Leithead Lan,
the well most beautiful and cool,
the fountain of Dun Mail.

Though many are my wanderings,
my raiment to-day is scanty;
I myself keep my watch
on the top of the mountains.

O tall, russet fern,
thy mantle has been made red;
there is no bed for an outlaw
in the branches of thy crests.

Bidh ann bhias mo bhithlighi

At ever-angelic Tech Moling, at puissant Toidhen in the south,
'tis there my eternal resting-place will be,
I shall fall by a [spear]-point.

The curse of Ronan Finn has thrown me in thy company,
O little stag, little bleating one,
O melodious little clamourer.”

as sin go Beann Faibhne agus ina dhiaidh sin go Ráth Murbhoilg ach níor chuir sé de an chailleach go ráinig go Dún Sobhairce in Ualtaibh.

Léim Suibhne ó mhullach an dúna caol díreach síos os comhair na caillí.

Léim sise go tapaidh ina dhiaidh

ach thit sí ina pleist ar aill Dhún Sobhairce go ndearnadh mionbhruar di

agus gur thit isteach san fharraige.

Is mar sin a fuair sí bás i ndiaidh Shuibhne.

After that lay Suibhne came from Fiadh Gaibhle to Benn Boghaine, thence to Benn Faibhne, thence to Rath Murbuilg,

but he found no refuge from the hag until he reached Dun Sobairce in Ulster.

Suibhne leaped from the summit of the fort sheer down in front of the hag.

She leaped quickly after him,

but dropped on the cliff of Dun Sobairce,

where she was broken to pieces,

and fell into the sea.

In that manner she found death in the wake of Suibhne.

Section 42

Atbert Suibhne iarsin:

Dúirt Suibhne iar sin:

“ní bheadsa i nDál Araidhe feasta, óir mharódh Loingseachán mé i ndíoltas na

dá mbeinn ar a chumas.”

Thug Suibhne a agaidh ar Ros Comáin i gConnachta dá éis sin
agus thuirling sé ar imeall an tobair gur chaith biolar agus uisce ann.

Tháinig bean as teach an airchinnigh chun an tobair;

ba é Forbhasach mac Fordhalaigh an toircinneach.

B’í an bhean a tháinig ann Finnsheang, iníon Fhíndealaigh.

Thereafter Suibhne said:

“Henceforth I shall not be in Dal Araidhe, for Loingseachan, to avenge his hag, would kill me
if I were in his power.”

Suibhne then went to Ros Comain in Connacht,
and he alighted at the brink of the well,
where he fared on watercress and water.

A woman came from the erenach’s house to the well;

Whereupon he said:

“O woman,” said he, “sad is it that you should take my watercress from me,

if you but knew the plight in which I am,

for neither tribesman nor kinsman pities me, nor do I visit as a guest the house of anyone

agus rinne sé an laoi seo:

And even if you did not take away my watercress,” said he,

“certain is it that you would not be without something else to-night as I am after my watercress has been taken from me”:

and he made this lay:

Is é mo mheá m’uisce fúar is é mo bhólacht mo bhiolar, is iad mo charaid mo chrainn, cé táim gan leann, gan ionar.

Is fuar anocht an oíche,
cé im’ bhocht de dhíth biolar, chuala guth an ghiúrainn ós Imleach iomlom Iobhair.

I go not as a guest
to the house of any man’s son in Erin, more often am I straying madly
on the pointed mountain-peaks.

None cometh to make music to me for a while before going to rest, no pity do I get
from tribesman or kinsman.

When I was Suibhne indeed and used to go on steeds — when that comes to my memory alas that I was detained in life.

I am Suibhne, noble leader (?),
cold and joyless is my abode,
though I be to-night on wild peaks,
O woman who pluckest my watercress.

My mead is my cold water,
my kine are my cresses,
my friends are my trees, though I am without mantle or smock.

Cold is the night to-night,
though I am poor as regards watercress,
I have heard the cry of the wild-goose over bare Imlech Iobhair.

Atú gan brat, gan ionar, fada a ulc úair romleanadh, teichim re guth na cuirre mar budh buille rombenadh.

Rigim co Dairebre ndaingen isna láibh aidhbhlibh earraigh, agus teichim ré n-oidhche síar co Boirche mbennaigh.

Diamsat eólach, a fionnghág, mo ghortní treórach tenngharg, atá nech dianad sgeile
an t-eiri berí, a bhengág.

At úara dotachuisin
ar brú tobair ghlais greanaigh, deogh ghleórdha d'uisci iodhan agus an biorar bhenaidh.

Mo chuid-si an biorar bheanaidh, cuid gheilte sáoire singi, sgingidh gæth úar mam reandaibh do bendaibh gacha binni.

As úar gæth an mhadanraíd, doicc etrom is mh'ionar,
nacha nfhétoim t'agalloimh,
a bhen bhenus an mbiorar."

Atáim gan brat, gan ionar, fada an drochuair dom' leanacht, teithim roimh ghuth na coirre mar ba bhuelle dom' leagadh.

Sroichim Dairebre daingean ins na laetha aoibhne earraigh, agus teithim roimh oíche siar go Boirche beannach.

Dá mb'eol duit, a fhionnbhean feosaí, ní láidir teanngharg é mo ghort, tá neach gur sceimhle dó
an t-eire bhainir, a bhean feosaí

Is fuar an méid atá ann ar imeall tobair ghlais ghreanaigh, deoch ghlé órga d'uisce íon agus an biolar a bhainir.

Mo chuidse an biolar a bhainir, cuid gheilte sáoire seinge, scinneann gaoth fhuar lem' leasracha do bheanna gacha binne.

Is fuar gaoth na maidine — téann idir mé is m'ionar, ní fhéadaim labhairt leat,
a bhean bhaineas an biolar."

I am without mantle or smock,
the evil hour has long clung to me (?),
I flee at the cry of the heron
as though it were a blow that struck me.

I reach firm Dairebre
in the wondrous days of Spring, and before night I flee westward to Benn Boirche.

If thou art learned, O fair, crabbed one,
my field . . .
there is one to whom the burden thou takest
is a grievous matter, O hag.

It is cold they are at the brink of a clear, pebbly spring — a bright quaff of pure water and the watercress you pluck.

My meal is the watercress you pluck,
the meal of a noble, emaciated madman;
cold wind springs around my loins from the peaks of each mountain.

Chilly is the wind of morn,
It comes between me and my smock,
I am unable to speak to thee,
O woman who pluckest the watercress."

and take a blessing, O Suibhne.”

Suibhne:

“Let us make a bargain just and fitting though I am on the top of the yew;
take thou my smock and my tatters,
leave the little bunch of cress.

There is scarce one by whom I am beloved,
I have no house on earth;
since thou takest from me my watercress
my sins to be on thy soul.

Mayest thou not reach him whom thou hast loved,
the worse for him whom thou hast followed;
thou hast left one in poverty because of the bunch thou hast plucked.

May a raid of the blue-coated Norsemen take thee, thine has not been a fortunate meeting for me, mayest thou get from the Lord the blame for cutting my portion of watercress.

O woman, if there should come to thee Loingseachan whose delight is sport, do thou give him on my behalf half the watercress thou pluckest.”

Táinic-siomh iaromh dhá ionnsaighe.

“Cía thú, a dhuine?” ar Suibhne.

“Geilt misi,” ar sé.

D’fhág Suibhne an charraig ina dhiaidh sin

agus chuaigh thar an mhuir fhairsing stoirmcheathach

go ráinig Críoch Bhreatan.

D’fhág sé dún rí na háite sin ar thaobh na láimhe deise

agus shroich coill mhór.

Ar a shlí tríd an gcoill chuala sé an t-éagaoineadh agus an mhairgneach mór agus an osnaíl éagcalma.

Is é a bhí ansin, gealt eile a bhí ar fuaid na coille.

Chuaigh Suibhne suas chuige.

“Cé thú, a dhuine?” arsa Suibhne.

“Gealt mise,” ar seisean.

Suibhne then left Carraig Alastair and went over the wide-mouthed, storm-swept sea

until he reached the land of the Britons.

He left the fortress of the king of the Britons on his right hand

and came on a great wood.

As he passed along the wood

he heard lamenting and wailing,

a great moan of anguish and feeble sighing.

It was another madman who was wandering through the wood.

Suibhne went up to him.

“Who are you, my man?” said Suibhne.

“I am a madman,” said he.

“Másat geilt,” ar Suibhne,

“tair ale co n[d]ernom comann,

“Fer Cailli mh’ainm,” ar an gheilt;

conadh ann itbert Suibhne an rann sa

ocus rofreagair Fear Caille é, mar so síos:

“Más gealt tú,” arsa Suibhne,

“tar i leith agus déanaimis cairdeas mar is gealt mise leis.

“Thiocfainn,” arsa an gealt eile,

“mura mbeadh go bhfuil eagla orm roimh mhuintir agus theaghla ch an rí agus n’fheadar nach díobh tusa.”

“Ní díobh go deimhin,” arsa Suibhne,

“agus ón uair nach díobh, abair liom cén ainm atá ort.”

“Fear Coille m’ainm,” arsa an ghealt.

Iar sin dúirt Suibhne an rann seo

agus d’fhreagair Fear Coille é mar seo:

“If you are a madman,” said Suibhne,

“come hither so that we may be friends, for I too am a madman.”

“I would,” said the other,

“were it not for fear of the king’s house or household seizing me, and I do not know that you are not one of them.”

“I am not indeed,” said Suibhne,

“and since I am not, tell me your family name.”

“Fer Caille (Man of the Wood) is my name,”
said the madman;

whereupon Suibhne uttered this stave and Fer Caille answered him as follows:

in sense or form?”

Fer Caille:

“I would tell thee my story,
likewise my deeds,
were it not for fear of the proud host of the king’s household.

Arsa Suibhne leis na ngealt:

“Tabhair cuntas ort féin domsa,” ar sé.

“Mac sealbhóra talún mé,” arsa an ghealt Bhreatnach.

“Is í seo mo thír dhúcais mar a bhfuilimíd anois

agus Alladhan is ainm dom.”

“Abair liom,” arsa Suibhne, “cad a thug ar “Ní deacair a rá.

Bhí tráth dhá rí ag troid a chéile féachaint
cé gheobhadh flaitheas na tíre seo.

B’iad sin Eochaidh Aincheas, mac Guaire

After that each confided in the other and they asked tidings of each other.

Said Suibhne to the madman:

“Give an account of yourself.”

“I am son of a landholder,” said the madman of Britain,

“and I am a native of this country in which we are,

and Ealladhan is my name.”

“Tell me,” said Suibhne, “what caused your madness.”

“Not difficult to say.

contending for the sovereignty of this country,

The hosts gave three shouts of malediction
on me,
which sent me wandering and fleeing as ocus romc[h]uirther ’san es mé go rombáiter ann

Rinneadar amhlaidh agus chaitheadar bliain iomlán i bhfochair a chéile.

Ag deireadh na bliana sin arsa Alladhan le Suibhne:

“is mithid dúinn scaradh inniu mar go bhfuil deireadh mo shaoil tagtha agus tá orm dul go dtí an t-ionad a bhfuil sé i ndán dom éag ann.”

“Cén saghas bás a gheobhaidh tú?” arsa Suibhne.

“Ní deachair a rá,” arsa Alladhan, “rachaidh mé anois go hEas Dubhthaigh agus tógfaidh cóch gaoithe mé agus teilgfear mé isteach san eas sa tslí go mbáfar mé.

They do so, and they were a whole year together.

At the end of the year Ealladhan said to Suibhne:

“It is time that we part to-day, for the end of my life has come,
and I must go to the place where it has been destined for me to die.”
“What death shall you die?” said Suibhne.

“Not difficult to say,” said Ealladhan;
“I go now to Eas Dubhthaigh, and a blast of wind will get under me and cast me into the waterfall
so that I shall be drowned,

“inis domsa cad tá i ndán duit féin?” D’inis Suibhne dó ansin faoi mar tá ráite anseo síos.
Iar sin scaradar.
D’imigh an Breathnach go hEas Dubhthaigh agus ó ráinig an t-eas

and I shall be buried afterwards in a churchyard of a saint,
and I shall obtain Heaven;
and that is the end of my life.
And, O Suibhne,” said Ealladhan, “tell me what your own fate will be?”
Suibhne then told him as the story relates below.
At that they parted
and the Briton set out for Eas Dubhthaigh, and when he reached the waterfall
he was drowned in it.

Tháinig Suibhne roimhe go hÉirinn ansin.

Tráthnóna thiar shroich sé Maigh Líne in Ultaibh.

Ar aithint na maighe dó, dúirt sé:

“Go deimhin ba mhaith eisean a rabhas ina

dúirt mé leis:

‘Ba mhaith liom dul go tiarna eile,’ — mar gheall ar a laghad tuarastail a bhí á fháil agam uaidh.

Ansin, le go bhfanfainn aige, thug sé dom

trí chaoga each álann ón gcoigríoch

Suibhne then came to Ireland, and at the close of day he arrived at Magh Line in Ulster.

When he recognized the plain he said:

“Good in sooth was he with whom I sojourned on the plain,

even Congal Claon, son of Scannlan, and good moreover was the plain on which we were.

One day Congal and I were there and I said to
him:

‘I would fain go to another master,’

because of the meagre recompense I received from him.

Whereat, in order that I might stay with him,
he gave me

I know too the plain wherein dwelt my mate Congal.

Once upon a time Congal Claon and I were here in the plain together;
as we were going to plenteous Druim Lurgain, we made converse for a while.

Said I to the king —
— . . . —
‘I am fain to depart too little do I deem my recompense.’

I got from him as a gift thrice fifty bridled steeds, thrice fifty strong swords,
fifty foreigners and fifty handmaidens.

I got from him the brown steed,
the best that sped over meadow and sward;
I got his golden tunic
and his girdle of chequered silk.

What plain is a match for Magh Line, unless it be the plain that is in Meath,

or the plain that is in Airgeadros?

Or Magh Feadha, or Magh Luirg, or Magh Aei with beauty of rank,

Luidh iarum Suibhne gusin bhail ina raibhí
Eorann

co rothoiris ar fordhorus in tighe

i mbói an ríogan cona bantracht, conadh ann adbert:

“Sádhail sin, a Eorann,” ar sé,

“As fior,” ar Eorann, “ocus táir-si asteach,” ar sí.

“Ní raghadt éimh,” ar Suibhne,

Dá éis sin ghluais Suibhne i dtreo na háite ina raibh Eorann ag cur fúithi.

Sheas sé ag fordhoras an tí mar a raibh an bhanríon gona bantracht thart uirthi

agus ansin dúirt:

“Is suaimhneasach ataoi, a Eorann,” ar sé,

“Is fior,” arsa Eorann, “ach tair isteach,” ar sise.

“Ní raghad go deimhin,” arsa Suibhne,

“Dár liom,” arsa an iníon, “nach bhfuil agus ón uair nach mian fanacht linne anseo,” ar sí,

Thereafter Suibhne went to the place where Eorann was

and stood at the outer door of the house wherein were the queen and her womenfolk, and then he said:

“At ease art thou, Eorann, though ease is not for me.”

“True,” said Eorann, “but come in,” said she.

“In sooth I will not,” said Suibhne,

“lest the army pen me in the house.”

“Methinks,” said the woman, “no better is your reason from day to day, and since you do not wish to stay with us,” said she,

Agus dúirt an laoi seo:

“go away and do not visit us at all,
for we are ashamed
that you should be seen in that guise by people who have seen you in your true guise.”

“Wretched in sooth is that,” said Suibhne,

“woe to him who trusts a woman after these words.

For great was my kindness to the woman who dismisses me thus,

seeing that on one day I gave her thrice fifty cows and fifty steeds;

and if it were the day I slew Oilill Cedach, ní theithinn ón gceithirn, áit ina mbíodh treas nó troid ba chomhlann mé do thríocha.

D’fhiabraigh Congal glan amach dínne ógaibh Uladh,
‘cé agaibh chloífidh ins an chath Oilill Céadach caithréimeach?’

“Woe to those who strike women’s fancy, however excellent their form,
since Suibhne Geilt
has got no sympathy from his first love.

And woe to him who trusts in women whether by night or by day, whatever be in their minds,
after the treachery of Eorann.

Good was my kindness to the woman — without guile, without deceit — she got from me thrice fifty cows and fifty steeds in one day.

When I was in the conflict
I would not avoid an armed band;
where there was a fight or a tussle
I was a match for thirty.

Rightly did Congal ask
of us Ulster warriors:
‘which of you will repel in battle Oilill Cedach the combative?’

Allata, fergach an fer, adhbhal a sgiath is a shleagh, dorat i socht seal an slógh,
an fer difreagra, dímhór.

Adubhart-sa ar láimh Chongail, noc[h]arbh áithesg fir omhnaigh,
'dingébhad-sa Oilill oll gidh trén tar chách a chomhlonn.'

Rofhágbhus Oilill gan chenn agus robudh lánmhaith leam, torchradar leam imalle
cúig mic rí Muige Mairge."

Mairg.

Allta, feargach an fear,
ábhal a sgiath is a shleá,
chuir i dtost seal an slua,
an fear mórfheargach rímhór.

Adúrtsa taobh le Congal caint nár chaint eaglach í, 'coinneod-sa Oilill oll
cé tréan thar cách a chomlann.'

D'fhágas Oilill gan cheann agus ba lánmhaith liom an gníomh, liomsa leis do thit
cúig mic rí Muige Mairge."

Wild and angry the man, huge his shield and his spear,
he stilled for a time the host,
the matchless, huge man.

Said I at Congal's side — it was not the response of a timid man —
'I will ward off mighty Oilill, though hard beyond all is it to encounter him.'

Headless I left Oilill, and right glad was I thereat;
by me also there fell five sons of the king of Magh Mairge."

ó gach ard-phointe

agus ó mhullach gach cnoic go haraile

gur shroich sé Beanna Boirche ó dheas.

Lig sé scíth san áit sin agus dúirt:

“Maith an t-ionad geilte seo cinnte ach ní hionad arbhair, bleachta ná bia é, áfach.

Tá sé mí-chompordach, neamhshocair anseo, agus ní díon é ar dhoineann ná ar fhearthainn cé gur ionad an-ard aoibhinn é.”

Agus dúirt sé na ranna seo:

Thereupon Suibhne rose lightly, stealthily, airily,

from the point of every height and from the summit of one hill to another until he reached Benn Boirche in the south.

In that place he rested saying:

“This is a spot for a madman, but yet no place is it for corn or milk or food;

it is an uncomfortable, unquiet place,

nor has it shelter against storm or shower,

though it is a lofty, beautiful place,” whereupon he uttered these words:

“Cold to-night is Benn Boirche,
'tis the abode of a blighted man;
no place is it for food or milk,
nor in storm and endless snow.

Cold is my bed at night on the summit of Benn Boirche;
I am weak, no raiment covers me on a sharp-branching holly-tree.

When cold has gripped me in the ice
I move sharply against it,
I give fire to the glinting wind blowing over the plain of Laoghaire’s Leinster.

Glen Bolcain of the clear spring,
it is my dwelling to abide in;
when Samhuin comes, when summer goes,
it is my dwelling where I abide.

Wheresoever I might wander west and east throughout Glanamhrach’s glens the biting snowstorm is in my face, for shelter of the chilly madman of Erin.

Mise i bhfearann glas nach gleann,
a Chríost nára shroichead!
ní dual dom a bheith ann — acht cé fuar mise, is fuar san.”

That is my beloved glen,
my land of foregathering,
my royal fortress that has fallen to my share,
my shelter against storm.

For my sustenance at night
I have all that my hands glean in dark oak-woods
of herbs and plenteous fruit.

I love the precious bog-berries, they are sweeter than . . .
brooklime, sea-weed, they are my desire,
the lus bian and the watercress.

Apples, berries, beautiful hazel-nuts, blackberries, acorns from the oak-tree, raspberries, they are the due of generosity,
haws of the prickly-sharp hawthorn.

wood-sorrels, goodly wild garlic,
and clean-topped cress,
together they drive hunger from me, mountain acorns, melle root.

I in a green land that is not a glen,
O Christ, may I never reach it!
it is not my due to be there;
but though I am cold, it also is cold.”

Táinic-siumh roimhe isin maidin arnamhárach co Magh Feimhin, luid aisséin co Sionainn sruthghlain sriobhúaine, asséin co hEchtge n-aird n-uraoibhinn,

aisséin co feronn míonghlás móirédrocht Maenmhuighe, aisséin co sruth sáoraluinn Suca, aisséin go himlibh Locha soileathain Ríbh.

Gabhaidh iaromh fós ocus comhnaidhe i nglaic Bhile Tiobradáin

i cCrích Gháille i n-oirther Connacht in oidhche sin.

Dá mhennataibh dísli-siom i nÉrinn an t-ionadh sin.

Tháinig roimhe an mhaidin dár gcionn go Maigh Feimhin;

chuaign as sin go Sionainn sruthghlan sreabhuaine;

as sin go hEachta ard aoibhinn;

ansin go fearann míonghlás móorghlan Meán Mhaí;

as sin go sruth saorálainn Suca agus as sin arís go himeallaibh sruthleathan Locha Ríbh.

An oíche sin fós,

chuir sé faoi i ngabhlóg Bhile Thiobradáin

i gCríoch Gháille in oirtheor Chonnacht.

B'in ceann de na hionaid ab fhéarr leis in Éirinn.

On the morning of the morrow Suibhne came on to Magh Femhin, thence he fared to the limpid, green-streamed Shannon, thence to lofty, beautiful Aughy, thence to the smooth-green, bright land of Maenmagh, thence to the noble and delightful river Suck, thence to the shores of spreading Lough Ree.

That night

he made his resting-place in the fork of Bile Tiobradain in Crich Gaille in the east of Connaught.

That was one of his beloved places in Ireland.

Rogabh tuisi mór ocus múichneachus é, conadh ann adbert:

“As mór éimh,” ar sé, “do imnedh ocus do dhocomhul rochésus conuige so, ba fúar mh’ionadh aréir .i. i mullach Bheinne Boirche

ocus ní nemhfhuaire mh’ionadh anocht a nglaic Bhile Tiobradáin.”

Ghabh tuirse mór agus laige coirp é go ndúirt:

“Is ró-mhór an trioblóid agus an t-imní atá dom chéasadh go dtí seo.
B’fhuar m’ionad aréir i mullach Bheinne
Boirche

agus ní lú ná sin an fuacht im’ ionad anocht
i ngabhal Bhile Thiobradáin.”

Great sorrow and misery came upon him,
whereupon he said:

“Great in sooth is the trouble and anxiety I have suffered hitherto;
cold was my dwelling-place last night on the summit of Benn Boirche,

no less cold is my dwelling-place to-night in the fork of Bile Tiobradain.”

Section 60

Úair is amhlaidh robhói an oidhchi sin, ag cur shnechta

ocus an mhéd nocuredh

noreódadh fachétóir a haithli a chuir, conadh ann adbert-somh: “Mo chubhais éimh,” ar sé,

“as mór do dhocruibh rofhuilnges-sa,

ó rofhás mo chlúimh gus anocht.

Óir is amhlaidh a bhí sé an oíche sin ag cur sneachta,

agus an méid a chuireadh

do reodh sé láithreach a haithle a chuir, sa tslí go ndúirt Suibhne: “Ar mo choinsias, is mór de dheacra atá fulaingthe agam

ón uair a d’fhás mo chlúmh orm go dtí anocht.”

For it was snowing that night and as fast as the snow fell

it was frozen,

whereupon he said: “My conscience,

great is the suffering I have endured from the time my feathers have grown until tonight.

Rofheadar,” ar sé, “cidh bás foghébhainn de, robadh ferr dhamh taobh do thabhairt re dáoinibh
iná na docra-sa do fhlang do ghrés;” gonadh ann adbert an laoidh ag tabairt a dhocra ós áird:

“N’fheadar,” ar sé, “cé gur bás a gheobhainn dá dheasca,
nár bhfearr dom muinín a chur i ndaoine ná na deacra seo a fhulaingt de shíor.” Agus d’aithris sé an laoi ag cur a dheacra in úil:

I know,” said he, “that though I might meet
my death therefrom,
it were better that I should trust people than suffer these woes forever.” Thereupon he recited the poem proclaiming aloud his woes:

“I am in great grief to-night,
the pure wind has pierced my body;
wounded are my feet, my cheek is wan,
O great God, it is my due.

Last night I was in Benn Boirche, the rain of chilly Aughty beat on me;
to-night my limbs are racked in the fork of a tree in pleasant Gaille.

I have borne many a fight without cowardice since feathers have grown on my body;
each night and each day
more and more do I endure ill.

Frost and foul storm have wrung my heart,
snow has beaten on me on Sliabh mic Sin;
to-night the wind has wounded me,
without the heather of happy Glen Bolcain.

Unsettled is my faring through each land, it has befallen me that I am without sense or reason,
from Magh Line to Magh Li,
from Magh Li to the impetuous Liffey.

Téim thar ghrua Shléibhe Fuaid, sroichim im’ ruaig go Ráth Mór, tar Mhaigh nAoi, tar Mhaigh Luirc sroichim go himeall Chruachain chóir.

Ó Shliabh gCua, ní turus tais, sroichim Glais Gháille ghrinn, ó Ghlais Gháille, cé céim chian sroichim soir go Sliabh Breagh binn.

Duaireann an bheatha bheith gan teach,
is trua an bheatha, a Chríost chaoin, béile biolair barrghlais buain,

Rithim ruaig le beinn go baoth im’ aonar, traochta ón lúth,

a mhic Dé, is móir an brón.”

I pass over the wooded brow of Sliabh Fuaid, in my flight I reach Rathmor, across Magh Aoi, across bright Magh Luirg,
I reach the border of fair Cruachan.

From Sliabh Cua — no easy expedition —
I reach pleasant Glais Gaille;
from Glais Gaille, though a long step,
I arrive at sweet Sliabh Breagh to the east.

Wretched is the life of one homeless, sad is the life, O fair Christ,
a meal of fresh, green-tufted watercress,
a drink of cold water from a clear stream.

Stumbling from withered tree-tops, faring through furze — deed without falsehood — shunning mankind, keeping company with wolves, racing with the red stag over the field.

Sleeping of nights without covering in a wood in the top of a thick, bushy tree, without hearing voice or speech;
O Son of God, great is the misery.

Foolishly I race up a mountain-peak alone, exhausted by dint of vigour;
I have parted from my faultless shape;
O Son of God, great is the misery.”

Section 62

“Howbeit,” said he,

“even if Domhnall son of Aodh were to slay
me,

I will go to Dal Araidhe

and I will entrust myself to my own people, and if the mill-hag had not invoked Christ against me

so that I might perform leaps for her awhile,

I would not have gone again into madness.”

Rofoillsigedh do Ronán an tan sin

Tháinig taom dá chéill dó ansin

agus thug aghaidh ar a dhuthaigh féin chun dul i muinín a mhuintire agus fanacht acu.

Fuair Rónán amach an t-am sin

A gleam of reason came to him then,

and he set out towards his country to entrust himself to his people and abide with them.

At that time it was revealed to Ronan

a chiall do tuidhecht do Suibhne ocus a bheith ag dul chum a thíre d'anadh eiter a mhuintir, co n-ébairt Rónán:
“Aitchim-si an Rígh uasal uilechumhachtach agus go raibh sé ag filleadh ar a dhúthraig féin chun cur faoi i measc a mhuintire.

Iar sin dúirt an naomh: “Iarraim ar an Rí uasal uilechumhachtach nach bhféadfaidh an sciúrsálaí sin

nár fhaighe sé fortacht ná fóirithint uaidh go scarfaidh a anam lena chorp that Suibhne had recovered his reason and that he was going to his country to abide among his folk;

whereupon Ronan said:
“I entreat the noble, almighty King

agus cúig cloigne gharbliatha ghuaireacha gan chorpa, gan cholainn eatarthu,

God heard Ronan's prayer, for when Suibhne came to the centre of Sliabh Fuaid

he stopped still there,

and a strange apparition appeared to him at midnight;

even trunks, headless and red,

and heads without bodies,

and five bristling, rough-grey heads

without body or trunk among them,

ag sianghai ocus ag léimnígh imon sligidh

Nuair a tháinig Suibhne eatarthu chuala sé ag comhrá lena chéile iad agus is ea a deiridís:

“Gheilt é,” arsa an chéad cheann díobh.

“Geilt Ultach,” arsa an dara ceann.

“Leanaimis go dlúth é,” arsa an tríú ceann.

“Gura fada an leanúint,” arsa an ceathrú ceann.

“Nó go sroichfidh sé an fharraige,” arsa an D’eíriodar in éineacht ina threo.

D’eitil sé uathu in airde rompu

When he came among them
he heard them talking to each other,
and this is what they were saying:
“He is a madman,” said the first head;
“a madman of Ulster,” said the second head;
“follow him well,” said the third head;
“may the pursuit be long,” said the fourth head;
“until he reaches the sea,” said the fifth head.

They rose forth together towards him.

Sliabh Eidhneach;
that night he rested there on the top of a tree until morning.

He then began lamenting grievously;

agus dúirt:

“Wretched indeed is it with me to-night

after the hag and the heads on Sliabh Fuaid, and yet it is right that I should be as I am, because of the many to whom I myself have done harm”;

whereupon he said:

He carried me into the great house wherein the host was feasting, and bound me behind in the house (?)
face to face with my first love.

The people of the house without reproach playing games and laughing;
I and my folk in the house
leaping and jumping.

Were it not for the hag of the house,
I would not have gone again into madness;
she besought me by Christ of Heaven to leap for her a little while.

I leaped a leap or two for the sake of the Heavenly Father Himself;
the hag at her house said that even so could she herself leap.

Once more I leaped out over the top of the fortress;
swifter than smoke through a house was the flight of the hag.

We wandered through all Erin,
from Teach Duinn to Traigh Ruire, from Traigh Ruire to Benna Brain,
but the hag I did not elude.

Through plain and bog and hillside
I escaped not from the slattern until she leaped with me the famous leap to the summit of Dun Sobairce.

Thereafter I leaped down the dun,
nor did I step back,
I went out into the sea,
yonder I left the hag.

There came then to the strand
the devil's crew to meet her,
and they bore away her body;
woe to the land of Erin in which it was buried.

Once as I passed over Sliabh Fuaid on a dark, black, gloomy night, on the hill I beheld five heads,
having been cut off in one place.

Said one of them of a sudden — harsh was the voice to me —
'a madman of Ulster, follow him so that you drive him before you to the sea.'

I sped before them along the path and I set not foot on ground;
both goat-head and dog-head then began to curse.

’Tis right that I should get harm;
many a night have I leaped a lake, many eyes of fond women have I made weep.”

On a certain occasion, Suibhne happened to be in Luachair Deaghaidh on his wild career of folly;

he went thence in his course of madness

until he reached Fiodh Gaibile of clear streams and beautiful branches.

In that place he remained a year and during that year his food consisted of blood-red, saffron holly-berries and dark-brown acorns,

and a drink of water from the Gabhal,

that is, the river from which the wood is named.

At the end of that time deep grief and heavy sorrow took hold of Suibhne there

i bforcenn na ré sin

tré olcus a bhethadh,

because of the wretchedness of his life;

whereupon he uttered this little poem:

this is my fare — I hide it not — ivy-berries, oak-mast.

A year have I been on the mountain
in this form in which I am, without food going into my body

The madman of Glen Bolcain am I, I shall not hide my gnawing grief;

not to me is there no cause for grief.”

for neither rest nor slumber cornes on my eyes for fear of my being slain.

That is natural,

because I would equally go into madness

at seeing the united hosts of the universe threatening me

as at the flight of a single wren;

and, O God of Heaven, cleric,” said Suibhne,

“that you are not in my place and I in the state of devotion in which you are,

so that your mind and understanding might recognise

that it is not usual for the like of me or for my counterpart to be happy as you say”;

Iar sin ghabh an cléireach tosach na laoi agus d'fhreagair Suibhne é mar seo:

whereupon the cleric recited the beginning of the poem

and Suibhne responded (by reciting) the end,
as follows:

Section 71

Suibhne:

“Ní socair mo bheatha-sa,

Sádail.

The cleric:

“Thou art at ease, madman, on the top of the yew-branch beside my little abode, thou hast eaten my watercress.”

Suibhne:

“My life is not one of ease,
O cleric of Druim Iarainn, such is my fear
that I do not close an eye.

If I were to see the men of the world coming to me, O man of the bell, I would flee from them as fast as at the flight of a wren.

Alas, that thou art not in my place and I a devout cleric,
so that thy mind might grasp that it is not the accomplishment of a madman to be at ease.”

Shantaigh Suibhne go mór an t-ionad sin

agus ghabh á mholadh agus ag cur síos os ard,

go ndúirt an laoi seo:

wild deer and hares and great, heavy swine were there also.

likewise many fat seals that used to sleep
on that cliff,

after coming from the main beyond.

Suibhne greatly coveted that place and he began praising and describing it aloud;

whereupon he uttered this lay:

“As moch-longadh sin, a ghealtagáin,” ar an cléirech;

conadh ann abert Moling ocus rofreagair Suibhne é:

Tháinig Suibhne roimhe faoi dheoidh go dtí an baile ina raibh Moling, is é sin, Teach Moling.

Bhí seisean an tráth sin agus saltair Chaoimhín os a chomhair amach aige agus é ag léamh aisti do na mic léinn.

Tháinig Suibhne ar shraith na tiobraide i bhfianaise an chléirigh agus chuaigh ag ithe biolair.

“Is moch-ithe sin, a ghealtagáin,” arsa an cléireach.

Iar sin labhair Moling agus d’fhreagair Suibhne mar seo:

At length Suibhne came along to the place where Moling was, even Teach Moling.

The psalter of Kevin was at the time in front of Moling as he was reading it to the students.

In the cleric’s presence Suibhne then came to the brink of the fountain and began to eat watercress.

“O mad one, that is eating early,” said the cleric;

whereupon Moling spoke and Suibhne answered him:

Moling:

“An early hour is it, thou madman, for due celebration.”

Suibhne:

“Though to thee, cleric, it may seem early, terce has come in Rome.”

Moling:

“How dost thou know, mad one, when terce comes in Rome?”

Suibhne:

“Knowledge comes to me from my Lord each morn and each eve.”

Moling:

“Relate through the mystery of speech tidings of the fair Lord.”

Suibhne:

“With thee is the (gift of) prophecy if thou art Moling.”

Moling:

“How dost thou know me,

Moling:

“Miserable one, will thy soul reach hell with vastness of slime?”

Suibhne:

“God inflicts no pain on me save being without rest.”

Moling:

“Move hither that thou mayest eat what thou deemest sweet.”

Suibhne:

“If you but knew, cleric,
more grievous is it to be without a cloak.”

Moling:

“Thou shalt take my cowl

Suibhne:

“If I am, ’tis not to be guaranteed what I might eat at early morn.”

Moling:

“Whence has come my recognition, cunning madman, to thee?”

Suibhne:

“Often am I upon this green watching thee from afar.”

Moling:

“Delightful is the leaf of this book, the psalter of holy Kevin.”

Suibhne:

“More delightful is a leaf of my yew in happy Glen Bolcain.”

Moling:

“Dost thou not deem this churchyard pleasant with its school of beautiful colours?”

Suibhne:

“Not more unpleasant was my muster the morning at Magh Rath.”

Moling:
“I will go for celebration to Glais Cille Cro.”
Suibhne:
“I will leap a fresh ivy-bush
a high leap, and it will be a greater feat.”

Moling:
“Wearisome is it to me in this church waiting on the strong and weak.”
Suibhne:
“More wearisome is my couch in chilly Benn Faibhni.”

Moling:
“Where comes thy life’s end,
in church or lake?”
Suibhne:
“A herd of thine
will slay me at early morn.”

do scéala agus d’imeachtaí a fhágáil anseo agus tú a adhlacadh i reilig firéan.

Agus ceanglaímse ort,” ar seisean, “cé mór do thaisteal gach lá in Éirinn, teacht chugamsa gach tráthnóna go scríobhfaidh mé síos do scéala.”

“Welcome in sooth is your coming here, Suibhne,” said Moling,

“for it is destined for you to be here and to end your life here;
to leave here your history and adventures,
and to be buried in a churchyard of righteous folk;
and I bind you,” said Moling, “that however much of Ireland you may travel
each day,
you will come to me each evening
so that I may write your history.”

Muirghil a hainm-sidhe,

Dála na geilte ina dhiaidh sin, chaith sé an bliaín sin ag siúl ar Mholing.

Lá amháin bhíodh sé in Inis Bó Finne in iarthar Chonnacht, lá eile in Eas Rua álainn,

lá ar Shliabh mínláinn Mis agus lá eile arís gheofaí ar Bheanna bithfhuara Boirche é.

Ach pé áit dá dtéadh sé gach lá thugadh sé a aghaidh gach tráhnóna ar Theach Moling agus dhéanadh freastal ar easparta ansin.

D'ordaigh Moling proinn bheag dó don tráth sin óir dúirt lena bhanchóaire roinnt de bhleán na mbó a thabhairt dó.

Muirgheal ab ainm di-se,

Thereafter during that year the madman was visiting Moling.

One day he would go to Innis Bo Finne in west Connacht, another day to delightful Eas Ruaidh,

another day to smooth, beautiful Sliabh Mis,

another day to ever-chilly Benn Boirche,

but go where he would each day,

he would attend at vespers each night at Teach Moling.

Moling ordered a collation for him for that hour, for he told his cook to give him some of each day's milking.

Muirghil was her name;

Ba é méid na proinne sin a bheireadh an bhean dó ná seo:

dhingeadh sí a sáil go dtína rúitín sa bhualtrach bó ba ghaire di agus d'fhágadh sí lán an phoill de leamhnacht sa pholl do Shuibhne.

Thagadh Suibhne go faiteach furchaidh isteach in idirfhásach na buaile chun an bainne sin a ól.

she was wife of Mongan, swineherd to Moling.

This was the extent of the meal the woman used to give him:

she used to thrust her heel up to her ankle in the cowdung nearest her and leave the full of it of new milk there for Suibhne.

He used to come cautiously and carefully into the vacant portion of the milking yard to drink the milk.

The herd’s sister hearkened to that;

nevertheless she mentioned nothing about it until she saw Muirgil on the morrow morning going to leave the milk for Suibhne in the cowdung near the hedge at which he was.

The herd’s sister seeing that, came in and said
to her brother:

“You cowardly creature, your wife is in óir ní fhéadaimse feasta teitheadh tríd an bhfál de bhíthin na gona a thugais dom.”

“Dá mbeadh a fhios agam gur tusa a bhí ann,” arsa an buachaill,

“ní ghoinfinn in aon chor tú dá mhéad é an gortú a dhéanfá orm.”

“Dár Chríost, a dhuine,” ar sé,

“ní dhearnasa aon diobháil duit in aon chor, pé rud a cheapann tú,

ná d’ aon duine eile ar droim dhomhain ach oiread

ó sheol Dia ar ghealtacht mé.

The herd came up to him.

“Dour is the deed you have done, O herd,”
said Suibhne,

“even to slay me, guiltless,

for henceforth I cannot escape through the hedge because of the wound you have dealt me.”

“If I had known that it was you were there,”
said the herd,

“I would not have wounded you

however much you may have injured me.”

“By Christ, man,” said he,

“I have done you no injury whatever as you think, nor injury to anyone else on the ridge of the world

since God sent me to madness,

"Mallacht Críst ort, a bhúachaill," ar Moling,

"as olc an gníomh dorighnis, goirde shaogail duit abhus

ocus ifrenn thall ar dhénamh an gníomha dorónais."

"Ní bfhuil bá do shodhain damh-sa," ar
Suibhne,

"uair tángadar bur ccealga im thimchell

Ba bheag an dióbháil duitse

mé a bheith sa bhfál anseo mnaoi thall.

Agus ní bheadh baint agam le do mhnaoi-se ná le haon mhnaoi eile ar thortháí an domhain."

"Mallacht Chríost ort, a bhúachaill," arsa
Moling,

"is olc an gníomh a rinne tú;

gairide shaoil duit abhus

agus ifreann thall ar dhéanamh an ghníomha do rinnis."

"Is beag an mhaitheas a thiocfaidh domsa as an méid sin," arsa Suibhne,

"óir tháinig bhúr gcealga im' thimpeall.

Beidh mé marbh ón ngoín a tugadh dom."

and of small account should be the harm to you

through my being in the hedge here and getting a little milk for God's sake from yonder woman.

And I would not trust myself with your wife nor with any other woman for the earth and its fruits."

"Christ's curse on you, O herd," said Moling.

"Evil is the deed you have done, short be your span of life here and hell beyond, because of the deed you have done."

"There is no good to me therefrom," said
Suibhne,

"for your wiles have compassed me and I shall be dead from the wound that has been dealt me."

agus dúradar tríur an laoi seo eatarthu,

Suibhne, Mongán agus Moling:

“You will get an eric for it,” said Moling,

“even that you be in Heaven as long as I shall be”;

and the three uttered this lay between them,

that is, Suibhne, Mongan, and Moling:

“Dorignis gníom, nach suáirc sin, a bhúachaill Moling Lúochair, nocha nfédoim dul fón fhál don ghuin romgon do dhubhlámh.”

[M.]

“Abair frium már cluine, a fhir, cúich thú, a duine, go deimhin?”

“As mé Suibhne Geilt gan oil, a buachaill Moling Luachair.”

[M.]

“Dá bfessain, a Suibhne sheing, a dhuine, dia nadaithninn nocha ttiubrainn gáí red chnes gé atchífinn thú dom aimhleas.”

“Nocha dernus thiar na thoir aimhleas duine ar druim dhomhain ó domrad Críst óm thír theinn ar gealtacht ar fhud Éirinn.”

Suibhne:

“Rinnis gníomh, ní suairc sin,
a bhúachaill Moling Luachair, ní fhéadaim dul fán bhfál, den ghoin ionam ód’ dhubhlámh.”

Mongán:

“Abair liom, má chluinir, a fhir, cé thú, a dhuine, go deimhin?”

Suibhne:

“Is mé Suibhne Geilt gan oil,
a buachaill Moling Luachair.”

Mongán:

“Dá mbeadh fhios agam, a Shuibhne sheing,
a dhuine, dá mb’agam d’aithe, ní thabharfainn ga led’ chneas cé go bhfeicfinn tú dom’ aimhleas.”

Suibhne:

“Ní dhearnas thiar ná thoir,
aimhleas duine ar druim dhomhain
ó thug Críost mé óm’ thír theann ar gealtacht ar fud Éireann.”

Suibhne:

“Not pleasant is the deed thou hast done,
O herd of Moling Luachair,
I cannot go through the hedge for the wound thy black hand has dealt me.”

Mongan:

“Speak to me if thou hearest, who art thou in truth, man?”

Suibhne:

“Suibhne Geilt without reproach am I,
O herd of Moling Luachair.”

Mongan:

“If I but knew, O slender Suibhne,
O man, if I could have recognised thee,
I would not have thrust a spear against thy skin though I had seen thee harm me.”

Suibhne:

“East or west I have not done harm to one on the world’s ridge since Christ has brought me from my valiant land in madness throughout Erin.”

[M.]

“Ro-innis, nocha b[r]eug dhamh, inghean mh’athar ’smo mháthar
th’ fághbháil isin fhál sin thoir ag mo mhnáoi féin ar madain.”

“Nír chóir dhuit a chreidemh sin

[M.]

“Dá ffesainn-si ’na bhfuil de,
do ghuin tréd chích, trét chroidhe, go bráth nítgonfadhbh mo láimh, a Suibhne Ghleanna Bolcáin.”

“Gé romgonais isin fhál nocha ndernus do thochrádh, ní thiubhrainn taobh ret mhnáoi ndil ar talmain gona thorthaibh.

Mongán:

“D’inis, ní nach bréag dom, iníon m’athar is mo mháthar tú d’fháil insan fhál sin thoir ag mo mhnaoi féin ar maidin.”

Suibhne:

“Níor chóir duit a chreideamh sin go bhfionnfá féin a dheimhin, mairg táinig dom ghoinse i leith nó go bhfeicidís do shúile.

Cé go mbínn as fál i bhfál, ba bheag duitse a dhíobháil,
cé go mbéarfadh bean dom deoch de bhainne beag in almsaine.”

Mongán:

“Dá mbéadh a fhios agam go fior,
do ghoin tréd chíoch, tréd chroi, go brách ní ghoinfeadh mo lámh tú,
a Shuibhne Ghleanna Bolcáin.”

Suibhne:

“Cé gur ghoinis mé sa bhfál, níor dheineas-sa do chrá, ní thabharfainn taobh led mhnaoi dhil ar thalamh gona thorthaibh.

Mongan:

“The daughter of my father and my mother related — ’twas no trifle to me — how she found thee in yonder hedge with my own wife at morn.”

Suibhne:

“It was not right of thee to credit that until thou hadst learnt its certainty, alas that thou shouldst come hither to slay me until thine eyes had seen.

Though I should be from hedge to hedge,
its harm were a trifle to thee, though a woman should give me to drink a little milk as alms.”

Mongan:

“If I but knew what comes of it,
from wounding thee through breast and heart,
till Doom my hand would not wound thee, O Suibhne of Glen Bolcain.”

Suibhne:

“Though thou hast wounded me in the hedge,
I have not done thee ill;
I would not trust in thine own wife for the earth and its fruits.

Mairg tainic athaidh ó thoigh

“tré éd i ccridhe do chnis, as trúagh an gníomh dorighnis.”

“Ó dorighnis gníomh n-úathmar,” atbert Moling re a bhúachuil, “raghaidh dhuit-si dar a chenn goirde shaoghail is ifreann.”

“Gé dognéi-si dioghal dhe
a Mholing, ní beó meisí, nochan fhuil mo chabair ann, dhuit-si, a Shuibhne, ón ArdChoimdidh.”

Mairg tainig óna thigh chugat, a Mholing Luachair, ní ligean dom dul fán gcoill, an ghoin lenar ghoin do bhuachaill.”

Moling:
“Mallacht Críost dochum gach clainn ort,” ar Moling lena bhuachaill, “trí éad i geroí do chnis is trua an gníomh do rinnis.”

“Ó do rinnis gníomh uafar,” arsa Moling lena bhuachaill, “rachaidh duitse thar a cheann gairide shaoil is ifreann.”

Suibhne:
“Cé go mbainfidh tú díoltas amach a Mholing, ní beo mise,
níl aon chabhair dom ann, tháinig bhúr gcealg im’ thimpeall.”

Moling:
“Rachaidh éiric dhuitse ann,” arsa Moling Luachra, “luaim comhfhad domsa ar neamh agus duitse, a Shuibhne, ón ArdChoimdhe.”

Alas for him who has come for a while from home to thee, O Moling Luachair, the wound thy herd has dealt me stays me from wandering through the woods.”

Moling:
“The curse of Christ who hath created everyone on thee,” said Moling to his herd, “sorry is the deed thou hast done through envy in thine heart.”

“Since thou hast done a dread deed,” said Moling to his herd, “thou wilt get in return for it a short span of life and hell.”

Suibhne:
“Though thou mayest avenge it,
O Moling, I shall be no more;
no relief for me is it,
your treachery has compassed me.”

Moling:
“Thou shalt get an eric for it,”
said Moling Luachair, “I avow; thou shalt be in Heaven as long as I shall be by the will of the great Lord, O Suibhne.”

[M.]

“Bidh maith dhuit-si, a Shuibhne sheing, thusa ar nemh,” ar an búacheill, “ní hionann as meisi sunn, gan nemh, gan soeghal agum.”

“ní hionann is mise anseo, gan neamh, gan saol agam.”

Suibhne:

“Ba bhinne liom, bhí am,

Mongan:

“It will be well with thee, O slender Suibhne, thou in Heaven,” said the herd, “not so with me here,
without Heaven, without my life’s span.”

Suibhne:

“There was a time when I deemed more melodious than the quiet converse of people, the cooing of the turtle-dove flitting about a pool.

There was a time when I deemed more melodious
than the sound of a little bell beside me
the warbling of the blackbird to the mountain and the belling of the stag in a storm.

There was a time when I deemed more melodious
than the voice of a beautiful woman beside me, to hear at dawn
the cry of the mountain-grouse.

There was a time when I deemed more melodious
the yelping of the wolves than the voice of a cleric within a-baaing and a-bleating.

Tháinig táimhnéal ar Shuibhne ansin;

d’éirigh Moling, agus a chléirigh fairis

agus thug gach fear acu cloch i leacht Shuibhne.

“Ionúin go deimhin an fear ins an leacht seo,” arsa Moling.

“Minic a bhíomar beirt — achar sona — ag comhrá le chéile feadh an chosáin seo.

B’aoibhinn liom Suibhne a fheiscint — an té atá sa leacht seo — ar an tiobraid thall.

Tiobraid an Geilte a hainm, agus is uaidh a ainmnítear an tiobraid.

Is ionúin gach ionad eile, leis, a thaithíodh
Suibhne;

A death-swoon came on Suibhne then,

and Moling, attended by his clerics, rose,

and each man placed a stone on Suibhne’s tomb.

“Dear in sooth is he whose tomb this is,” said
Moling;

“often were we two — happy time — conversing one with the other along this pathway.

Delightful to me was it to behold Suibhne —
he whose tomb this is — at yonder well.

The Madman’s Well is its name, for often would he eat of its watercress and drink its water,

and (so) the well is named after him.

Dear, too, every other place that Suibhne used to frequent”;

conadh ann abert Moling:

agus dúirt Moling an laoi seo:

whereupon Moling said:

remembrance of him has wrung my heart,
dear to me too, out of love for him,
each place in which the holy madman used to be.

Dear to me is fair Glen Bolcain because of perfect Suibhne’s love of it;
dear each stream that flows out of it,
dear its green-topped watercress.

Yonder is the Well of the Madman,
dear was he to whom it gave food,
dear to me its clear sand,
dear its pure water.

On me was imposed his preparation,
it seemed long until I should see him,
he asked that he be taken to my house,
dear was the lying in wait.

ar a uaigh is ar a leachtán.”

If it be the will of the King of the stars, arise and come with me,
give me, O heart, thy hand
from the grave and from the tomb.

Melodious to me was the converse of Suibhne, long shall I keep his memory in my breast:
I entreat my noble King of Heaven above his grave and on his tomb.”

D'éirigh Suibhne as a néal ansin agus ghabh Moling ar láimh é, go rángadar rompu ina ndís go doras na heaglaise.

Chuir Suibhne a ghuala le hursain an dorais, thug osna mór os ard

agus d'éalaigh a spiorad chun neimhe.

D'adhlaic Moling é le honóir.

Thereafter, Suibhne rose out of his swoon and Moling taking him by the hand
the two proceeded to the door of the church.

When Suibhne placed his shoulders against the door-post
he breathed a loud sigh
and his spirit fled to Heaven, and he was buried honourably by Moling.
